Ask Rusty – About Survivor Benefits For Children Who Are Minors

Dear Rusty: My nephew died suddenly at 50 years of age and left 2 children, ages 17 and 14. He was divorced, but they were married for more than 10 years, and his ex-wife works as a nurse. My nephew worked for more than 10 years during his lifetime. I want to know if the children are eligible for survivor benefits and the amount of benefits they will receive, and if their mother's income will affect their eligibility.

Also, will my nephew's exwife be eligible for survivor's benefit as she is taking care of a child younger than 16 years old? She did not remarry. Will her income affect her survivor's

Step By Step: 6 Tips For Preventing Falls

(StatePoint) Few things are more important to older adults than their independence -- being able to do what they'd like when they'd like. But independence can be fleeting. Something unexpected, like a fall, can change everything. That's why it's important for older adults and their loved ones to take steps now to reduce the risk of a fall from happening.

Three million older people are treated in emergency rooms each year because of injuries caused by falls, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). This includes broken bones and head injuries that can rob individuals of their freedom. Even having a fear of falling can restrict individuals from enjoying their life to the fullest.

Thankfully, many falls can be prevented with a little forethought and advance planning, according to Dr. J.B. Sobel, chief medical officer

Your nephew's minor children are eligible for benefits and their mother's income won't affect their survivor benefit from their father. Both minor children currently qualify for a survivor benefit from their father, and the benefit for each could be as much as 75% of the benefit their father had earned up to the month he died. They will remain eligible for this benefit until they reach 18 years of age (or 19 if still in high school). It's possible that Social Security's "Family Maximum" may slightly reduce each child's survivor benefit to a bit less than 75%, but any such reduction for the 14 year old will disappear when the 17 year old turns 18 and becomes ineligible for child survivor benefits).

Could It Be That 'Senior Moments' Are The Result Of Too Much Knowledge Rattling Around In Your Brain?

by John Grimaldi

Dementia is not an inevitable part of growing old. On the other hand memory issues are, indeed, a part of the aging process.

A new study published in the journal, Trends in Cognitive Science, reveals that perhaps forgetfulness is a result of an overabundance of information we have stored in our brains, according to the authors of the review, Tarek Amer at Columbia and Harvard Universities and Jordana Wynn at Harvard. Their assessment asserts that: "Healthy aging is accompanied by declines in control of attention. These reductions in the control of attention result in older adults processing too much information, creating cluttered memory representations. Cluttered representations can impair memory by interfering with the retrieval of target information but can also provide an advantage on tasks that benefit from extensive knowledge.'

In other words, the older you are the more information you have stored in your brain - so much information that it can interfere with your ability to remember. However, as someone once explained, it is normal to forget where you left your glasses, it is not normal to forget that you wear glasses. The Centers for Disease Control [CDC] says that forgetting things that can disrupt your life is not part of growing old.

The CDC says the risk factors for dementia include smoking, high blood pressure, not getting enough exercise, being overweight, trouble sleeping, isolation and blood sugar levels and cites the British medical journal, The Lancet, which suggests that dealing with these risk factors can "prevent or delay" 40% of dementia cases.

Bomb Threats Against HBCUs: A History Of Domestic Terrorism

The American Historical Association (AHA) has released a statement historicizing and condemning the numerous bomb threats received by at least 17 Historically Black Colleges and Universities in early 2022. "These crimes are part of a long history of attacks on institutions that serve the Black community,' writes the AHA. "[These acts] spawned not only a hateful legacy, but also a current, ongoing threat to the physical safety and emotional well-being of all Black Americans.' To date, 28 organizations have signed onto the statement. The AHA's statement is reproduced below and available, along with a full list of signatories, on our website. Feel free to quote from the statement or to publish it in its entirety. AHA staff are available to discuss the statement; for interview requests, please contact press@historians.org.

The approach of Black History Month this year ignited the simmering bigotry underlying much of American domestic terrorism, with bomb threats sent to at least 17 Historically Black Colleges and Universities (HBCUs) between January 30 and February 1. At last count the number had risen to at least 19 targeted institutions, with most of them recording multiple incidents. These crimes are part of a long history of attacks on institutions that serve the Black community—churches, schools, and civil rights organizations—as well as on the individual men, women, and children associated with these institutions. Violent intimidation directed toward Black Americans has a long and bloody history, and recent events suggest that these acts have spawned not only a hateful legacy, but also a current, ongoing threat to the physical safety and emotional well-being of all Black Americans. Whether or not such threats indicate the presence of explosives on campuses, they are intended to terrorize, intimidate, and harass students, faculty, and staff.

The institution of chattel bondage had as its foundation physical violence or the threat of it against enslaved women, men, and children. After the Civil War, whites (especially but not exclusively those in the South) sought to replace the legal system of slavery with a form of social and legal control that relied on terrorism directed toward Black voters, school children and teachers, political activists, and anyone whose success or even mere demeanor appeared to threaten the imperatives of white supremacy. White vigilantes burned churches and schoolhouses in an effort to eliminate Black community centers and institutions of faith and formal education. Whites intended that lynching and the public burning and dismemberment of Black men and women and other horrific acts of violence should serve as a warning to all those who aspired to an education or sought to exercise their newly won rights as American citizens according to the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution. Well into the 20th century throughout the United States, white Americans rioted to protest Blacks' attempts to integrate whites-only neighborhoods and public spaces, and burned and shot at places where Black activists gathered.

Today, the domestic terrorists issuing bomb threats against HBCUs hide behind the cloak of anonymity to instill fear in everyone connected with these institutions. The threats disrupt classes, upend the rhythm of the semester, and wreak havoc with the routines of everyday college life. Directed at pillars of Black higher education, the threats strike at the heart not only of the aspirations of Black students and the work of Black faculty and staff, but also at the ideal of higher education itself. The AHA condemns this latest in a centuries-old series of assaults on Black Americans and on the educational institutions that are integral to a diverse, free, informed, and open society.

Founded in 1884 and incorporated by Congress in 1889 for the promotion of historical studies, the American Historical Association provides leadership for the discipline and promotes the critical role of historical thinking in public life. The Association defends academic freedom, develops professional standards, supports innovative scholarship and teaching, and helps to sustain and enhance the work of historians. As the largest membership association of professional historians in the world (nearly 12,000 members), the AHA serves historians in a wide variety of professions and represents every historical era and geographical area.

New Indiana Chamber Program Saves Companies 10% On Workers' Compensation Premiums

Hoosier businesses can save 10% off their estimated annual workers' compensation premiums courtesy of a new Indiana Chamber of Commerce partnership with the ClearPath Mutual Insurance Company.

Businesses are eligible for the program if they have been in existence for at least three years and are a member in good standing with the Indiana Chamber on the effective date of the policy or within the first 30 days of coverage. These businesses are eligible regardless of their estimated annual premium, before or after the association membership discount, and even if they are already a ClearPath Mutual policyholder. (Current underwriting guidelines apply.) Workers' compensation insurance has become a major expense for many Hoosier businesses, and this partnership will benefit our members through significant savings, especially for those in higher-premium industries," relays Indiana Chamber President and CEO Kevin Brinegar. "We're excited to partner with ClearPath Mutual and so pleased to be able to provide this offering to Indiana businesses.

ClearPath Mutual Insurance Company is a monoline workers' compensation insurance carrier headquartered in Louisville. ClearPath Mutual writes nearly $50 million in premiums and is the second largest workers' compensation carrier in Kentucky. The company has approximately 7,000 policyholders in Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee, and works with independent agency partners throughout the country.

"As essentially a local company that serves all of Indiana, it's such a natural fit to partner with the Indiana Chamber," says Jeff Borkowski, ClearPath Mutual CEO.

"Together, we will provide member businesses with workers' compensation coverage from a highly-rated provider at a significant savings.'

Interested businesses can learn more and start the process at www. indianachamber.com/ clearpath.

A note on procedure: It is the responsibility of the insurance agent to notify ClearPath Mutual's underwriting department of member businesses. Insurance agents need only to contact their ClearPath Mutual underwriting team to notify if a new business submission, or current policyholder, is a member of the Indiana Chamber. If a current policyholder is a member business, the discount will be applied at their renewal.

contact Social Security as soon as possible (at her local SS office or at the national service center number -1.800.772.1213) to apply for survivor benefits for her children. She may need to provide their father's death certificate (although SS may have already received that from the funeral director) as well as the children's birth certificates. If your nephew's exwife doesn't remarry before age 60, at that time she will become eligible to collect a survivor benefit from her deceased ex-husband. But claimed at age 60 that survivor benefit will be reduced by 28.5% from what it would be if she waits until her full retirement age (FRA) to claim it (a survivor benefit reaches maximum at the survivor's FRA but is reduced if claimed earlier). If she claims her survivor benefit prior to reaching her FRA and she is working, Social Security will impose an earnings limit which, if exceeded, could result in the loss of some of her survivor benefits. Earnings limits for future years aren't yet known, but the 2022 earnings limit is $19,560. The earnings limit will no longer affect her Social Security benefits after she reaches her full retirement age. This article is intended for information purposes only and does not represent legal or financial guidance. for Medicare, with Cigna, one of the nation's largest insurers, which serves hundreds of thousands of older adults through its Medicare plans. Dr. Sobel recommends older adults take the following precautions to prevent falls and increase their peace of mind.

Get an annual eye exam. More than 12 million Americans aged 40 years and older experience vision impairment, putting them at greater risk of falling. It's important for them to get an annual eye exam and make sure that they wear their glasses as instructed. Many Medicare Advantage (MA) plans, such as those offered through Cigna, provide some vision coverage at no extra cost.

Review medications. People tend to take more medications as they age. Some of these medications, or a combination of medications, can cause dizziness or confusion, cognitive problems, according to the National Institutes of Health [NIH]. The NIH notes that "It's normal to forget things once in a while as we age, but serious memory problems make it hard to do everyday things like driving, using the phone, and finding your way home."

One can only report on the differences between "senior moments," normal occasions of forgetfulness, and the potential of dementia. So, if you are having too many forgetful moments, you should consult your health care provider.

resulting in falls. Seniors should talk to their doctor or pharmacist about the medicines they are taking, including overthe-counter medications, regarding any interactions or unwanted side effects.

Do strength and balance exercises. Regular exercise strengthens muscles and improves balance and flexibility, helping reduce the chance of falls. Many MA plans include a fitness benefit at no extra cost. The benefit may include kits, bands and videos that can be used at home to help limit exposure to COVID-19, while achieving the benefits of exercise. Patients should always talk to their doctor about what exercises are right for them.

Limit alcohol consumption. Even a small amount of alcohol can affect a person's balance and reflexes, leading to a fall. According to the National Institute on Aging, alcohol is a factor in 60% of falls in older Americans. For those individuals who may need it, Medicare covers alcohol abuse screening, counseling and treatment. Please be sure to discuss these types of issues with your doctor.

Ensure a safe home. Seniors can benefit from having grab bars installed inside and outside the bathtub tub or shower and next to the toilet, as well as having railings installed on both sides of stairs. Also, potential tripping hazards, such as floor mats, area rugs or extension cords, should be removed or taped down, both inside and outside the home.

Be careful with face masks. Wearing a face mask is a reality of the times, even after a COVID-19 vaccination, but face masks can restrict peripheral vision. When wearing a face mask, make sure it is snug covering both your nose and mouth, and take slow and measured steps.

Those who wear glasses should wash the lenses with soap and water (if permitted by the manufacturer), shake off the excess liquid and allow them to air dry. This can help provide a fog barrier.

"Today, many older adults take good care of themselves and feel younger than they are," Sobel said. "They are rightfully proud and don't want to make concessions for their age. But a fall can happen to the best of us. So, it's better to be safe than sorry."
