THREE THINGS You Should Know:

1 Freya, a bulldog belonging to the Mosher family of Middle Sackville, Nova Scotia, gave birth to seven pups, but she wasn't finished. Along came an eighth puppy encased in a black sac and it appeared to be stillborn, reports the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. Suddenly it began to move. But the story doesn't end there. As the Moshers proceeded to clean the newborn pup they noticed that it was bright green in color. Trevor Mosher told Global News "We started to dry her off and noticed she was green and immediately again thought there was something wrong. So we googled it, 'my puppy is green, what's wrong,' and apparently it is very rare and it has happened a few times all over the world." Mother nature can be funny that way.

Fiscally Responsible Tax Cuts

The 2022 legislative session came to a close this week, and I am happy to see a number of important initiatives pass the General Assembly, including fiscally responsible tax cuts.

House Enrolled Act 1002 phases down Indiana's income-tax rate to 2.9%, tied for the lowest rate in the nation, and could save Hoosier taxpayers up to $1 billion once fully implemented. This phased-in tax reduction is contingent on state revenue continuing to grow, ensuring we are continuing to practice fiscal responsibility.

Sen. Phil Boots

Hoosiers will also benefit from HEA 1002 repealing Indiana's utility receipt tax in an effort to help combat rising utility costs.

Lastly, this legislation pays down pension debt in order to keep our promises to retired Hoosier teachers.

I am proud to have supported this effort and believe this, as well as other measures passed this session, will continue to push Indiana in the right direction.

Sen. Phil Boots represents Montgomery, Fountain, Parke, Vermillion and Warren counties and a portion of Boone County. He is one of the shareholders of The Paper of Montgomery County.

Hammer Pays A Visit To The Missus . . .

EDITOR'S NOTE: Tim Timmons will be returning soon. He underwent quadruple bypass surgery and is on the mend. In his stead this week, his wife Linda reports on an unexpected visit from a very familiar face.

TIM TIMMONS
Two Cents

As a publisher's wife I've encountered many people with opinions about the news and newspapers, most of them very pleasant. But I wasn't expecting someone beating so hard on our front door recently.

Linda Timmons

As you all know, Tim has been away from the job recovering nicely from heart surgery. He's showed me the many cards, e-mails and messages from you kind folks. And, as Tim says, truth to tell, I didn't expect to see Mr. John Hammer at our door to check up on Tim and to talk a bit. But there he was - and I knew who he was before he told me. Tim has described him to a T and yes, he does take up an entire doorway. As soon as he started to talk, I had to tell him to shoo his booming voice a bit because Tim was asleep.

"How can I help you, Mr. Hammer?" I asked. He said, "Call me John, Mr. Hammer was my dad."

Developing Humans, And Not Human Capital

It's six am, your shift starts in an hour, and your one-year-old has a fever. You scroll through your contacts wondering who can watch your baby. Why, you wonder, is life never smooth, never calm? You'll ponder that question again that night when your childcare provider calls to say she's closing her home daycare in a few weeks. Now you have the added stress of finding a new provider.

Who can you afford? Who watches babies, is kind, has a safe environment, and won't leave the TV running all day? You find yourself worrying about the future, of years of finding new providers. You've read that the schools or maybe the state might start a PreK program. What a relief if they do. Maybe your bank account and life could get a break if you can survive this year or two. You'd love to have someone read more to your kid, but it never occurs to you that rule out daycare providers because they don't. What a luxury to be choosy about childcare. If only, you could afford to ask, "How will you help my child's social-emotional, brain development?"

Across town at six am another parent is cooing as he dresses his infant. He'll drop the baby off in an hour at a daycare where children play in a room loaded with stimulating toys. Screens don't exist. Adults are rocking babies, making happy faces, and talking to them. In the toddler and pre-K rooms, the bathroom is right off the

Judging By The Cover: Classically Beautiful Books

While strolling through the library's shelves a few weeks ago I discovered a beautiful copy of Robert Louis Stevenson's Treasure Island (FIC Ste). It was bound in green cloth like a classic novel from the 1800s or early 1900s and covered with foil-stamped parrots. Even though the book itself was published in 2009, it felt like a copy that could have been found in a Victorian mansion. I wanted to take it home and put it on my own bookshelves as a display piece. After discovering this book, I started keeping an eye out for other books like this in the collection. There were quite a few and I desperately wanted to make a

Donald Lee Swisher

Oct. 23, 1931 - March 9, 2022

A life very well lived for 90 years ended on March 9, 2022, when Donald Lee Swisher left this world to join his wife, Faye and son, Duane.

Mr. Swisher was born on Oct. 23, 1931, in Boone County, Ind. to Wyvone ("Pete") and Mary Swisher.

On a recent, short stay in a hospital cardiac unit, before he returned home as he wished, his care providers had no idea how much he would enjoy sharing the story of his life's work. He ran a local grocery store when he was only 17. He left his grocery store to join the Air Force when called to serve his country in the Korean War. After the service, Mr. Swisher worked for a home builder before he took a job at RR Donnelley & Sons.

While he always appreciated hearing "thank you for your service," he never felt that he needed to be "thanked." He often described his Air Force service as the greatest four years of his life. He traveled the world, leaving Dover, Ind. far behind to experience life in Guam and Greenland. He excelled at Parks College of Aeronautical Technology in St. Louis, and, while stationed in Roswell, New Mexico, he gave rides to a young, guitar-toting hitch hiker named Elvis.

His life after the service truly began when he whistled, from his perch on a press at Donnelley's, at a "mail girl" named Faye. They were married in Parkersburg and lived in Crawfordsville, where they made a wonderful, happy life for their son Duane and daughter Deanna. While working swing shift had its challenges, generous vacations from Donnelley's were a fantastic opportunity for family travel, usually driving west, to camp and enjoy national parks and natural wonders and wildlife throughout America.

Working as a pressman at Donnelley's was a great fit for his mechanical talents, attention to detail, and appreciation of a good prank on a co-worker. When he retired, his family had to wonder how he ever had time for a full-time job. He was always busy - refinishing antiques, caning chairs, and repairing and rebuilding everything in sight. When he took a break, it was for travel, so that he and Faye could experience Hawaii, Alaska, and Europe.

His ultimate passion, which earned him the nickname "the Bike Man," occupied most of the last two decades of his life. He enjoyed the work of preparing each bicycle for its next owner, and he loved every opportunity to help someone find the right bike - especially if they were looking for a bike for their child. He got so much pleasure out of his driveway conversations with everyone that stopped by to find a bike or needed part, find out what they needed to do to fix their bike, or marvel at the number of bicycles that he could fit in his garage. Mr. Swisher particularly appreciated it when one of "Duane's swimmers" stopped by or paused to chat when he was running errands in town, to share stories about the positive influence that his son, their coach Swish, had on their lives.

His talents, and the extraordinary benefit of having him as a role model, lives on in his daughter Deanna Swisher and her husband Nick Stonebrook, and their children Ian and Devon, as well as his grandson Ty Swisher, his wife Amber, and their sons Brecken, Osborne and Keldon.

Three of Don's brothers, Herschel, Bob and Harold, left this world before Don, leaving their youngest brother Chuck to tell the tales of five brothers growing up on the family farm.

Please join his family to celebrate Don's life on Saturday March 19, at Hunt & Son Funeral Home, 107 N. Grant Avenue, Crawfordsville. Visitation is scheduled from noon until 2 p.m., with a memorial service and burial of his ashes to follow.

How One Small Company Will Change The Way Things Are Delivered, Reducing Delivery Theft

The New York Times reports that 1.7 million packages go missing or are stolen each day. This has been increasing over the years, with it becoming common for people to place online orders, only for "porch pirates" to intervene and steal the delivery from the porch. One company, DRONEDEK, is changing the way things are delivered. Using ground robotics and traditional methods, they give people the receptacle that provides a whole new way of protecting their packages.

"Just about everyone has had a package stolen from the porch or knows someone who has," says Dan O'Toole, the founder and chief executive officer of DRONEDEK. "We have created a safer way to eliminate such problems. It's going to change the way people receive their deliveries, as well as send out packages, using a heated and cooled cargo bay."

DRONEDEK is a receptacle where people can receive package deliveries and place their outgoing packages. Only it's more than a homemade box on the porch where items are to be placed. The receptacle is a patented, smart receptacle that works with a drone to ensure that packages are received and are allowed to be taken only by those who own the case.

Focusing on the last mile of the delivery process, DRONEDEK allows people to automate everything fully. They can use an app on their phone to see where their package is and when it's been placed into the receptacle. If they are sending packages out, they can use the app to see when they were picked up. The DRONEDEK receptacle is especially helpful for those ordering medicine, items of high value, confidential deliveries, and more.

Some of the features that help to make the technology so revolutionary include:

- The receptacle is weatherproof, including withstanding freezing temperatures and those up to 115 degrees Fahrenheit.

- An external heater will melt the snow in front of it. The internal temperature of the unit is also temperature controlled.

- The system uses cloud computing and is app-enabled, offering a secure system with simple ways to track everything. It has remote access and is Bluetooth enabled.

- Encryption is used for opening the receptacle keeping deliveries safe from thieves, animals, and the elements. It uses a state-of-the-art locking device and also has emergency features enabled.

- The device also features a slot for conventional mail to be deposited in.

- Receptacles can be secured to the porch, roof, window, house, building a mounted box, or existing edifice or mailbox.

"Those who regularly order things of value that they don't want to be stolen should consider the DRONEDEK," added O'Toole. "This unmanned route to safe and secure delivery will ensure you get the items you ordered. It's a delivery system that outsmarts the thieves who are out stealing packages. The future of safe package delivery is here!"

DRONEDEK was founded by Dan O'Toole, who worked on the idea for years before seeking a patent and funding to expand the company. The company has since raised $7.1 million, and the distribution of the receptacles takes place this year. The delivery system helps to reduce theft expenses and increases delivery efficiency. It's been dubbed the "mailbox of the future," allowing people to send and receive items securely.

The company recently announced it has partnered with Helium to allow for greater wireless network expansion. To date, Helium is the most extensive public Internet of Things (IoT) network globally, suitable for millions of affordable long-range, low-power LoRaWAN devices. DRONEDEK will be using the Helium network for select sensors within smart mailboxes, such as GPS and temperature. Helium hotspots will be put into DRONEDEKs in areas with limited coverage to help build out the network.

“OK then, what can I do for you, John?”

“Well, I wanted to see how Timmons is doing, and talk to him about this Ukrainian war.” “John, let’s let Tim sleep a little longer, but while you wait, could I offer you a cup of coffee?”

We sat there and talked a bit. He asked about the bypass operation and how the recovery was going. Then we got to Tim’s last column about Whoopi.

“Well Mrs. Timmons, what did you think about that one?” he asked.

“John, at first, all Tim told me was he had written a column defending Whoopi Goldberg . . . and, well, I just about went off on him. But he was facing heart surgery, so I kept my thoughts to myself. I mostly disagree with everything Whoopi Goldberg says and does. But after it was published and I read it, I saw that it was really about defending freedom of speech – just one of the basic freedoms our servicemen and women work and fight for.”

“OK, Mrs. Timmons,

what’s your take on the Russian invasion.”

“I’m thinking China is waiting on the outcome to see if they can overtake Taiwan without global interference,” I told him. “Also, what if President Biden was as crazy as Putin? Would VP Harris and others stand up and have him imprisoned? Do Putin’s generals not see how crazy this is? How much more will this escalate? Chemical weapons? Nukes? And Alaska isn’t that far from Russia. If worst came to worst, could I stand up to a tank like the Ukrainian people are? Could you, John?”

Before he could answer Tim came into the kitchen.

“I thought I was dreaming, but that really is your voice I heard,” Tim said.

“Just checking up on you, Timmons,” the man called the Hammer said. “When are you going to be back?”

“Well John, the boss here (Tim said, pointing at me) and the docs want me to work from home for a bit. But I’m feeling better every day and hope to get back soon.”

“Mrs. Timmons makes a great cup of coffee and we’ve been talking about the war and some of your columns. Let me ask you, Timmons, does she always agree with you?”

Tim laughed. “No John, she certainly doesn’t. But on the big stuff, stuff about the constant squabbling between Republicans and Democrats and some of their childish behaviors, she’s like a lot of us and doesn’t understand. She tries to live by God’s golden rule and wishes everyone else would do the same.”

“Glad to see you’re in good hands, Timmons. You be good to her because I surely know she’s good to you. God bless you both.”

And with that he was out the door. I can see why Tim likes him so much.

Two cents, which is about how much Timmons said his columns are worth, appears periodically on Wednesdays in The Paper. Timmons is the publisher of The Paper and can be contacted at timmons@thepaper24-7.com.

rocking babies, making happy faces, and talking to them. In the toddler and pre-K rooms, the bathroom is right off the classroom, snacks and lunch are delivered to the room, the windows are high, the sun makes the colors pop on the children’s musical instruments. In this program, children don’t have to line up to walk across the building for the bathrooms. Their teachers don’t police their wiggly little bodies to get them to the cafeteria. The chances for amplifying disciplinary issues drop because everything, from building layout, to food service, to teacher training anticipates age-appropriate behavior.

It turns out that these small details may be the critical difference that makes effective and high-quality childcare. They may be more important than educational activities. Dale Farran has been researching childcare for over two decades. When Tennessee offered free PreK to some low-income children, she and researchers at Vanderbilt University began following the children. What she learned surprised and disappointed her. Though the state program implemented an educational curriculum, the participants fared poorly in third grade and worse by sixth grade. On average, they had lower test scores than peers who were not in the PreK program. They were more often receiving special education services and had more serious disciplinary records. Her study, published in February, suggests that some programs may have negative effects on children. Farran reported to NPR that it means we must research and understand the design of programs.

It’s not just about a boost in academic skills. Young children need nurturing and healthy, long-term relationships to build emotional regulation. They need to play to foster creativity, peer relationships, and imagination. The design of programs matters.

To understand the call for high-quality childcare, it helps to know the history. In the 1960s, just over a hundred kids in Detroit’s low-income areas participated in the Perry Preschool Project. It was roundly considered a success. To this day, participants have better health and depend less on social support systems. Part of its design included home visits to teach parents how to extend the learning at home. While gains in IQ and test scores evened out with non-participants, one of the side effects of inviting parents into the program was providing greater “serve and return” opportunities for young children.

“Serve and return” is what Harvard calls the kind of attention that all babies, toddlers, preschoolers, even older children need. It grows the brain and strengthens social and emotional connections. It begins in infancy, when a baby bids for eye contact, for touch, for language. Their coos and cries are the “serve.” When adults return the attention they need, it grows the babies’ neural networks. Research about brain development, as well as Farran’s research, suggests that the emphasis in early childcare should be on social, emotional, linguistic development, starting with “serve and return.” Play too is critical and still allows children to learn to sort, classify, name letters/numbers/colors, create patterns/sets/series, move, sing, and regulate their emotions or impulses in social interaction.

Farran’s study participants, about three thousand Tennessee children, have not been tracked into adulthood yet as have the Perry Project and participants in the 1970’s Abecedarian Project in North Carolina. Both of the early projects showed higher rates of school completion, lower reliance on public social services, and improved health but only studied a little over a hundred kids each. Farran’s study is far larger.

Programs can and do help but Farran’s study shows that we don’t understand all the factors yet. Perhaps attending to EQ (emotional intelligence) development as much as IQ matters.

Parents with resources choose holistic programs, and those tend to have improved outcomes. They provide wrap-around experiences at home. They have the means to help their children mature and find self-actualization. They don’t tend to focus on raising “human capital.” The challenge we face is transferring these priorities into widely accessible programs for households that struggle to make ends meet, where parents work odd shifts or multiple jobs and face more life stressors than their middle-class counterparts.

Braun, Marshall Introduce Bill To Further Research On Natural Immunity

Senator Mike Braun and Senator Roger Marshall have introduced the Apply the Science Act which would require GAO to conduct an evaluation on HHS/CDC to further research on the value of infection-acquired COVID immunity, the availability of this information and how it impacts CDC decision making, and the value of diagnostics in the COVID-19 response.

“For too long, the effects of natural immunity for COVID have been disparaged and ignored. It’s due time for the federal government to Apply the Science and conduct a comprehensive study on the impact of natural immunity.”—Senator Mike Braun emergency, and we must leverage the GAO’s expertise and experience as a watchdog government agency. I’m proud to partner with Senator Braun on legislation that will ensure federal, state, and local governments are making decisions based on unbiased scientific facts. Only then can we really learn to live with COVID-19 and not have it control our lives.”—Senator Roger Marshall

“The American people deserve to know how the CDC develops guidance during a public health

Specifically, the legislation would require GAO to conduct an evaluation on HHS/CDC to assess:

The current scientific understanding of the duration and effectiveness of COVID-19 immunity resulting from a prior infection, vaccination, or both, including any differences across population groups

The extent to which the CDC makes available the information it’s used to inform its policy decisions related to COVID-19 infection acquired immunity

The extent to which select foreign countries account for scientific evidence pertaining to COVID-19 infection-acquired immunity when creating public health regulations or guidance

The extent to which diagnostic tests that measure immune response be better utilized in a comprehensive COVID-19 response (particularly for high risk populations). GAO is required to send a report to Congress within 18 months.

display out of them, if for no other reason than the aesthetic joy of seeing a display that looks like it belongs in the library of a reclusive professor who spends too much money on beautiful books.

After scouring the library (literally book by book) I created a list of tomes that I deemed “Classically Beautiful”. Some really are classics like Treasure Island, Villette by Charlotte Bronte (FIC Bro), Les Miserable by Victor Hugo (FIC Hug), or Lady Chatterley’s Lover by D.H. Lawrence (FIC Law). Some are local works with unique covers. For example, The Indiana Home by Logan Esarey (977.2 Esa) has a beautiful stamped design on the front.

Other books are much more modern. I highly recommend checking out the book Pew by Catherine Lacey (FIC Lac). The cover mimics a traditional cloth-bound novel, but in places it looks as if chunks have been ripped off, revealing bright silver foil below.

This is a good representation of the story inside, in which a mysterious figure appears in a church in the American South. Genderless, racially ambiguous, and refusing to speak, no one in the small town knows what to do with “Pew.” They are shuttled from house to house and no one knows what to make of them. Are they an Angel? A Demon? Something else entirely? Their presence may just fracture the tiny community.

I also had to include one of my favorite books on this display, Rejected Princesses by Jason Porath (920.72 Por). While the golden gilded designs on the front are just printed on, it clearly looks like a book meant for royalty. Jason Porath is a former DreamWorks animator who drew animations for movies like The Croods, Kung Fu Panda 2, and How to Train Your Dragon 2. He has taken his illustrating talent and drawn a book of real historical women who were too uncompromising, too untoward, or too uncomfortable to fit into the modern princess mold, but who would make excellent heroines in their own right. This book is a fun read for children, teens, and adults. The rejected princesses are separated into chapters based on maturity level, so parents can make sure younger readers don’t discover some of the grisliest deeds of a few of the princesses, but adults can also learn the real history of some incredible women.

As you can see our Classically Beautiful display has a little bit of everything. So why not come in and design a book by its cover for once? Pick out whatever catches your eye and give it a chance.
