Italian authorities have hired a new guard to protect the ruins of the ancient city of Pompeii - a tireless patrol dog. reports the Association of Mature American Citizens. What breed of dog, you ask? It's a 21st century "quadruped robotic dog" with the not-so-21st century name of Spot. Gabriel Zuchtriegel, director of the Pompeii Archaeological Park, says "Often the safety conditions within the tunnels dug by grave robbers are extremely precarious, and so the use of a robot could signify a breakthrough that would allow us to proceed with greater speed and in total safety."

Boy, how lucky can a guy get. Tom Jozsi of Kenosha, WI swallowed a drill bit that wound up in his lung and survived, according to the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. Thank goodness it was a tiny drill bit that his dentist was using in preparation for a filling. Jozsi told reporters at WISN-TV, "I was at the dentist getting a tooth filled, and then next thing I know I was told I swallowed this tool. I didn't really even feel it going down. All I felt was a cough. When they did the CT scan they realized, you didn't of children was a luxury for the well-off. Nannies, au pairs, Black women coming into other people's homes to keep house and care for children, all of these options were out of reach for low-income parents with no option to stay at home and nurture their children.

In spite of gender conservatism, when the social order dictated that women- at least white women- should stay home to nurture their offspring, the need for quality childcare has always been around. The need was so pronounced in the Industrial Revolution, as the American economy moved away from agrarianism, that children were at risk. Parents had no option other than to take their children to work every day. The dangerous working conditions resulted in so many children's injuries and deaths that they sparked social reform movements. The Industrial Revolution reform societies established "infant" or "day" nurseries in New York City, Boston, and Philadelphia. Often these philanthropic programs focused on the health and safety of children rather than their developmental needs. Though the reformers opened up these programs to serve low-income and immigrant families, they blatantly barred children of color from participating. Too often those mothers cared for White children while their own children were left at home, their care delegated to older siblings, relatives, or neighbors. Remember To Kill A Mockingbird's Calpurnia? She had children at home but many readers might never wonder, who kept her house and cared

Producer Sentiment Improves with Rising Commodity Prices, High Cost Inflation Worries Farmers

The Purdue University/ CME Group Ag Economy Barometer improved in April, up 8 points to a reading of 121; however, it remains 32% below its reading from the same time last year. Producers' perspective on current conditions and future expectations saw an uptick over the past month. The Index of Current Conditions improved 7 points to a reading of 120, and the Index of Future Expectations improved 9 points to a reading of 122. The Ag Economy Barometer is calculated each month from 400 U.S. agricultural producers' responses to a telephone survey. This month's survey was conducted April 18-22.

"Rising prices for major commodities, especially corn and soybeans, appear to be leading the change in producers' improved financial outlook," said

James Mintert, the barometer's principal investigator and director of Purdue University's Center for Commercial Agriculture. "However, it's hard to overstate the magnitude of the cost increases producers say they are facing.

The Farm Financial Performance Index improved to a reading of 95, up 8 points from March, and 12 points higher than in January and February. As Mintert suggests, much of this could be attributed to the strengthened commodity prices. For example, Eastern Corn Belt cash prices for corn in mid-April rose more than 10% above their mid-March levels while bids for fall delivery of 2022 crop corn climbed 20% over the same period. Soybean prices rose as well. Nearterm delivery prices for soybeans rose about 7% from mid-March to midApril, while elevator bids for fall delivery of new crop soybeans climbed 5% over the one-month span.

Even as commodity prices have strengthened, producers continue to say higher input costs are the top concern for their farming operation. In April, 42% of producers chose higher input costs as their biggest concern, which was more than twice as many who chose government policies (21%)or lower output prices (19%). In April, 60% of survey respondents said they expect input prices to rise by 30% over the next 12 months. This compares to an average of 37% of respondents who said they were expecting a cost increase of this magnitude when the same question was posed in the December 2021 through March 2022 surveys.

When asked specifically for their expectations for 2023 crop input prices compared with prices paid for 2022 crop inputs, 36% of respondents said they expect prices to rise 10% or more and 21% of crop producers said input price rises of 20% or more are likely. The war in Ukraine has also added a new level of uncertainty for producers. Sixty percent of survey respondents said the biggest impact of the war on U.S. agriculture will be on input prices.

Crop input challenges extend beyond their inflated cost to their availability. In April, 34% of producers said they experienced some difficulty in purchasing inputs for the 2022 crop season, up from 27% in March. In a follow-up question, producers who said they had some difficulty obtaining inputs said that herbicides (30% of respondents) were most problematic, followed closely by farm machinery parts (27%), fertilizer (26%), and insecticides (17%). In a related question, 11% of crop producers said they received notice an input supplier would not be able to deliver one or more crop inputs they had already purchased for use in 2022. Of those, herbicide availability was the top problem reported.

Despite an overall improved financial performance outlook, the Farm Capital Investment Index remains at its all-time low. Supply chain problems remain a key reason many producers feel now is not a good time for making large investments in their farming operations. For example, just over 40% of producers said their farm machinery purchase plans were impacted by low machinery inventories.

The rising cost of all inputs, including machinery, buildings, and grain bins, is likely another factor causing producers to say now is not a good time for large investments.

Each month, the Purdue Center for Commercial Agriculture provides a short video analysis of the barometer results. For even more information, check out the Purdue Commercial AgCast podcast. It includes a detailed breakdown of each month's barometer, in addition to a discussion of recent agricultural news that affects farmers.

The Ag Economy Barometer, Index of Current Conditions and Index of Future Expectations are available on the Bloomberg Terminal under the following ticker symbols: AGECBA-RO, AGECCURC and AGECFTEX.

Much of the problem of childcare has resulted from social mores that prescribed women stay home, regardless of intelligence, skill, or drive.

From the 1850s through the 20th Century, all manner of doctors, reformers, and others telegraphed that children would be stifled if their mothers worked. At the turn of the 20th Century, Jane Addams and Julia Lanthrop of the US Children's Bureau promoted "mothers' and widows' pensions" to pay women to stay with their children, arguing their nurture was an act of national service. After World War II through the 1970s, politicians opposed government supported childcare because it would, in the words of Richard Nixon, "sovietize" American families. It seems that few have held the both/ and notion that children might experience both familial bonding, even with working parents, and reap benefits from high-quality childcare.

The binary has been the argument - either appropriate emotional bonding, which is supposedly exclusive to family relationships, or a narrative that parents have ceded their responsibilities to 'the state.' Binaries tend to offer false and limited options that squelch needful policies for those working so hard they cannot take the time to become a noisy gong or squeaky wheel for their cause. Instead of a genuine assessment of what is both needful and beneficial, reforms reflect philanthropic or aspirational intentions. To salt the wound, childcare is denigrated as a second-class option.

This history of limited or unavailable childcare options always affects rural communities because the need is cloaked behind more dispersed populations. We end up with "daycare deserts" that beg for systemic, holistic community solutions. Here in Montgomery County, childcare is one of three top concerns of both corporations and citizens. For corporations who need reliable employees, they need parents who are socially healthy and unencumbered with worry and stress about their kids' safety and health. They and the whole community also need childcare that serves the intellectual, emotional-social wellbeing of little humans because this will reduce mental health stressors and the likelihood of addiction-the two other top concerns- in the next generation.

In 2019, Crawfordsville received a childcare development grant because it has been one of those deserts. Over 1800 children under the age of six need spots in high-quality childcare programs. Presently, about half of parents are not fully satisfied with their options for caregiving, and as a number of parents surveyed by MCCF noted, quality doesn't matter if there aren't seats or if those seats don't accommodate the hours and days parents need to place their child under care.

When four of five employers know that their employees come to work with divided attention and stress over childcare, when those employers factor the availability of quality childcare into their presence- now and in the future- as critical, it's become a systemic concern worth the attention of our local government.

MCCF's Lisa Walter noted that staffing is the most significant issue. Providers often make less than a fast-food employee but need more training and soft skills. The tension between what families can afford, what can be subsidized, and how to pay caregivers makes turnover and availability a problem. When wages are low in comparison to the cost of living, families just can't afford quality childcare. Like their predecessors, they resort to any livable option to the detriment of their kids.

As yet, no philanthropic, nor private system can fund and improve a quality system. In a nation as developed as ours, we should be able to ask for government assistance to implement programs that meet real demand. MCCF is trying. As Walter noted, "Our coalition can help support employers in creating family-friendly policies, setting up agreements to reserve high-quality child care seats for their employees, and creating dependent care accounts to help families find the right balance of support.

for quite a while on critical issues. Do we devote significant resources to growing, or do we keep things like they are? It wasn't that many years ago when County GOP Chair and political candidate John Pickerill told this reporter that he wanted Montgomery County to look just like it did when he grew up decades before. Flash forward to today. The city and county spend a fair amount of time and money on economic development to foster growth.

OTIMMONS

Which side is right? Which is wrong. Neither. Both are entitled to think and act the way they believe best. That's what elections are all about.

It's after those elections that things go off the rails. One side, one philosophy wins. We move forward. Except we don't. More and more the losing side says they're taking their ball and going home. Some won't even acknowledge the winning side, let alone respect it.

Thing is, it's not about who gets the respect. It's about respecting the process. It seems like each election we slide apart a little farther. The national politicians don't help when they sling more mud than a teen-ager in a pig wrestling contest. Win or lose, they call out their opponents by compar-

That is filtering down. Simply put, we don't respect the process of voting anymore. We don't respect what this country is based on - that everyone is entitled to their opinion and the majority rules

If the Republic is to survive we need to find a way back to mutual respect. Election winners and losers don't have to become bosom buddies, just respect the process that got them to where they are. If your side wins, govern with grace. If your side loses, hold your tongue and work toward winning the next election.

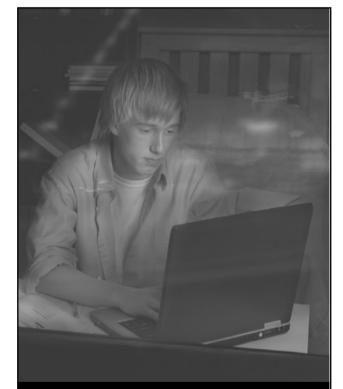

Fair and square. Without the hi-jinx. Ditto for all of us non-politicians, too

The process has survived for 246 years. Add in one simple thing and it has a good shot at 246 more. Keep up the division and who knows. Even Vegas might not touch the odds on that one
