Changing a tire on your car in one-minute-17-seconds is a challenging feat in itself but Gianluca Folco did it while his pal, Manuel Zoldan, was driving their car, reports the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. Sounds like it would be impossible. Not for these daredevils. Zoldan simply drove up a ramp and flipped their BMW onto two wheels while Folco, hanging out of the car, changed a tire. The Guinness Book of World Records recognized their achievement, noting that it took the previous record holders a relatively slow minute and a half to change their tire.

It's severe weather season, and according to a new report, Americans are not prepared. A recent survey found that 82% of Americans don't own a weather radio, and many turn to Google when they want to find out about weather events in their region. In Indiana the most commonly searched severe weather question is: "what is a winter weather advisory?" Questions about tornadoes were most common nationwide and 1 in 4 Americans don't know the difference between a tornado watch and a warning. The other most common severe weather questions nationwide include "when is hurricane season?" and "what causes earthquakes?"

Big Music Opportunities In July For CHS Graduate

Full time singer songwriter, and former resident, Abbie Thomas, now of Goshen, Ind. is near the tail end of a resume building July. Thomas is a graduate of Crawfordsville High School, and was a scheduled performer at the Strawberry Festival, but her performance was canceled due to inclement weather.

Thomas went full time with her music career in June of 2021, with the release of her selffunded (and all original) debut album, "Who I Am". This project also included the release of 3 music videos. Those releases plus her new self-produced EP, "Dirty Little Things", in combination with some behind-thescenes hustle, is starting to pay off.

On average, she normally plays live music 2-3 times per week, but her July tour schedule includes 17 live dates. These performances are a mix of her regular winery and restaurant gigs, with a handful of big opportunities.

July 21 was a chance to

Abbie Thomas

highlight her songwriting ability at Three Oaks, Michigan's Acorn Theater. Thomas earned a spot as one of six finalists in the tenth annual Singer Songwriter Competition, with her song "Lucky Penny". In a combination of judge and audience vote, she placed second to California's Dr. Kray Van Kirk. On the same evening, her Hollywood Music in Media (HMMA) nominated music video, "Fireflies". was featured in Chicago's Blue Whiskey Independent Film Festival.

The final stretch of her July tour may be her biggest chances to move her career to the next level, Today, she'll be opening for The Voice 2021 winners, 'Girl Named Tom', in Anderson, Indiana at the Paramount Theater. (She is also scheduled for a second opening act date for 'Girl Named Tom' at Wabash, Indiana's Honeywell Center on August 20.) She then hits the road with her full band (made up of musicians from Northern Indiana) to Miami, Oklahoma for the Route 66 Heritage Festival. She'll be opening for Laine Hardy, winner of American Idol in 2019. The Route 66 Fest in 2021 had 35,000 in attendance for the Saturday night concerts.

Thomas and her band hit the stage Saturday, July 30 at 7:00pm. "The last year has been filled with nothing but songwriting, rehearsals, gigging, studio sessions. video shoots, and many long nights. My husband and I keep saying that we just need one right person to hear me play, and these performances are exactly what we're looking for to get heard. Fingers crossed", commented Thomas.

You can listen to Thomas' original music on iTunes, Spotify and YouTube. Her full tour schedule is located on her website, www.abbiethomasmusic.com.

Duke Energy Foundation Awards More Than $175,000 In Microgrants

The Duke Energy Foundation is awarding more than $175,000 in microgrants to support 47 local emergency management agencies across the company's Indiana service territory. The funding is designed to help public safety agencies increase their resiliency to severe weather events and other emergencies through advanced preparation, planning, equipment and training. Each organization will receive up to $10,000 in funding.

"At Duke Energy, we put safety first in everything we do - and we're committed to helping our local emergency management agencies prepare to respond in any type of emergency situation," said Stan Pinegar, president of Duke Energy Indiana. water authorities, we currently have cleaner and healthier water here than at anytime in the last 100-150 years. We can affirm this by recalling the progress made in identifying the pollutants in Sugar Creek and then working to clean them up during the last 50 years. When we see a sign today that says "No Swimming" where there has been swimming in the past, we might come to the wrong conclusion. Such a sign likely speaks more to contemporary vigilance rather than current practices. Right now we are testing [water] more than anytime in history. Keeping all our waters clean is an ongoing challenge and requires ongoing work, of course. Most readers are familiar with the volunteer work of Friends of Sugar Creek. Professional government programs provide the strong backbone to keep our soil and water safe. It is their mission.

Fortunately for rural America, far-sighted people saw that soil and water would need widespread protection back in the 1930s. What looked like good farming and water use practices out West led to the Dust Bowl. In 1935, after "dirt clouds" actually reached Washington, DC, Congress acted. President Roosevelt signed the Soil Conservation Act into law in 1935. (It was updated in 1977 and 2011.) The law was designed "to provide for the protection of land resources against soil erosion and for other purposes." Water management and conservation are central to these efforts. To create a conduit for federal soil and water conservation funds, Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCD) were formed across the nation.

Because of this nearly 90-year old legislation, we have tools for addressing problems here in Montgomery County in 2022. We are fortunate to have an active SWCD. Maybe you saw Megan demonstrating "soil pizza" at a recent festival or perhaps you saw Kristen showcase our county's ag leadership at the SWCD annual meeting. Maybe you noticed there will be an urban garden tour in a few days. Perhaps you paddled down Sugar Creek on the Farmer Friendly Float Trip. Have you been on a Weed Wrangle yet? These are all SWCD projects in action.

If you farm in Montgomery County, you likely know Marc Roberts. Marc is the Secretary for the Indiana Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts (IASWCD) and he farms near Mace. As he sees it, his main job is to stay in touch with farmers employing conservation practices in Montgomery County and parts of the other three counties he serves. The scope of SWCD work is wide and deep. To understand a piece of it, let's hone in on Clean Water Indiana (CWI), a state program whose mission is enshrined in its name.

Our county's SWCD has been a powerful CWI advocate and activist. The funds in Clean Water Indiana are supplied by a small fraction of Indiana cigarette tax money and a line item in the state budget. Each county is given a stipend of $10,000 and granting opportunities provide additional resources. In recent years, MoCo has been a successful competitor in three grant cycles. SWCD program coordinator Megan Sweeney arrived in the county last fall and has wasted no time in building invaluable bridges to help people who live in town, especially, understand their role in conserving soil and water. Under her leadership, Montgomery County Community Growers has formed. The Community Growers sponsor the westside Garden Tour on July 30.

CWI also works closely with other state and federal conservation programs including one that promotes taking land out of production for long periods; other partner programs promote land and river health and provide resources and education to engage citizens in promoting urban soil health. Do you know what a soil slump test is or just how important deep rooting systems are in cover crops and why? It might be time to learn.

As he looks back over his 15 years of professional soil and conservation work, Marc Roberts notes that real changes have come, some of them pre-dating his time as supervisor. Many more farmers today, for instance, try cover crops than they did a decade ago. Cover cropping reduces soil loss. No-till, which also reduces soil loss, has been increasing over the last 30 years. When soil loss is reduced, the land has a much better chance to retain water through the seasons.

According to Roberts, ongoing scientific work at improving fertilizers and herbicides as well as the technology employed to use them "at the right rate at the right time and in the right place" has led farmers to be more savvy soil and water conservation practitioners. For instance, Round-Up Ready bean seed, developed in the mid-90s, has dramatically reduced farmers' need to till.

Looking at the water part of the picture, Roberts is quick to say, "Our #1 priority here in Montgomery County is Sugar Creek. It cuts our county in two and is highly visible to all. It's a destination for boating, fishing, tourism, crinoid seekers, and more. Virtually all other ditches and creeks in the county drain into Sugar Creek and then into the Wabash."

Because of this, we must manage livestock carefully and safely; ag runoff must be reduced; and, urban residents need to monitor their use of water and chemicals. Soil health should be everyone's priority. Whether it's by employing no-till, or planting cover crops, or a backyard vegetable or pollinator garden, it all matters. As Kristen Latzke, our SWCD conservation director, notes, "Sometimes there is a little disconnect between those who live in town and those who live in the country but everyone impacts conservation. You can play a positive or negative role [in conserving our soil and water] no matter where you live.'

Electric Light & Power," commented Don Swearingen, President of the Utility Service Board.

"The Utility Service Board faced a difficult task in finding a replacement for Phil. With over 40 years of service to the Utility and community, he has done it all and successfully conquered every challenge he met. We found the solution in promoting Allison, an individual who is a vital part of the team and who can see important decisions through. She is looking forward to the many challenges CEL&P faces, from the expansion of our transmission capabilities, to better serving our customers, and to moving the Utility to more renewable energy in the years ahead. There are exciting times ahead for the electric utility industry & the USB is excited to have Allison in place to lead us."

Well, OK, the grass
was green and the sky

blue. But that was about it.

Didn't matter.
I'm pretty sure if you looked up the definition of cute in your Funk & Wagnall, these kids would be there. For example, when the game ended the coaches tried to line up these 4- and 5-year-olds so they could shake hands or high five the other team. Yeah, right. These little guys and gals had no clue. Half of them put their left hand up in the air, palm outward and then walked by as the other team passed on their right.

If you're a baseball purist, you might not recognize the field. There are dots chalked into the infield and outfield. The dots represent zones, and when the team takes the field, each kid stands on a dot . . . sometimes even after the ball is hit. At other times, they might run to that same dot instead of first base after they hit the ball.

Innings did not consist of outs – thank goodness or otherwise we might still be there. Rather, every kid got to bat, and run the bases . . . sort of. When the ball was whacked off the tee, it was anyone's guess if six kids were going to dive for it, completely ignore it or, in a couple of instances, the batter fielded the ball and gave back to the coach.

For a little while, there wasn't inflation or gas prices or Democrats or Republicans. Just a bunch of little boys and girls of all sizes, shapes and colors, getting along, playing a game that dates back to the 1800s. They weren't staring at a screen – grass or butterflies maybe, but not screens. They were laughing, yawning, interested, distracted and all the things pre-schoolers do over the course of an hour. For a little while, just a little while, all was right with the world.

Hearing Loss Makes Your BRAIN WORK HARDER

If you're struggling to hear, you don't just miss a few sounds here or there. New research shows that adults with hearing loss experience a 40% faster decline in cognitive abilities. This suggests that the entire brain may be struggling to fill in the gaps caused by untreated hearing loss.

Beltone Hearing Care Practitioners point to new research. "Several studies have done imaging to look at the brains of people with varying degrees of hearing loss," Beltone says.

With normal hearing, the section of the brain that's responsible for hearing lights up during imaging. But the scans reveal a different picture for a person with untreated hearing loss. Researchers found that the hearing center of the brain shrinks in age-related hearing loss. Therefore, other areas of the brain necessary for memory and thinking must take over to help compensate. That's why people with hearing loss are more fatigued at the end of the day. Your brain is having to work harder if you have untreated hearing loss.

"We want to keep you as healthy as we possibly can. And with hearing aids, you're not only taking care of your hearing and your relationships, but we have the potential, because of the auditory stimulation, to provide benefit for your brain health."

The symptoms may be obvious when you're struggling to hear your grandchild or trying hard to follow a conversation in a crowded place, but many people do not realize that even when you're home alone or in a quiet environment, your brain is still having to work harder than it should to compensate for your hearing loss.

Thankfully, research is showing that when hearing loss is detected early and treated with hearing aids, the brain can reorganize itself back to its usual operation. This research may help explain the link between hearing loss, cognitive decline and memory loss.

Beltone Hearing Care Practitioners say "We want to keep you as healthy as we possibly can. With hearing aids, you're not only taking care of your hearing and your relationships, but we have the potential, because of the auditory stimulation, to provide benefit for your brain health. Hearing loss is not just about your ears. A lot of people tell us that they 'get by just fine', but we remind them that they need to think beyond communication and instead think in terms of overall health."

BUILD A RELATIONSHIP

with a Hearing Care Specialist you can trust

If you've had a hearing exam before, you can expect a very different experience when you walk into Beltone. The Specialists readily admit that their goal is to help treat hearing loss, not to sell you a hearing aid.

"Often people walk in and their guard is up," say Beltone. "We get it. They say, 'I don't want to be sold to'. I say, 'Great! You're in a great spot!' We're health professionals, working in your best interest." While many folks shop for the lowest price for hearing aids, it is highly recommended to shop for the best healthcare professional that you feel comfortable with to ensure your satisfaction and "Think of your hearing in terms of the whole package. If you needed knee surgery, would you shop for the cheapest implant or the most qualified and experienced surgeon to provide the best product, outcome and follow-up care?"

You will be satisfied not when you pay the lowest price but when you get the best overall value for your investment, which is why at Beltone we are professional hearing care specialists that offer the most advanced hearing technology and service.

We pull from over 80 years of hearing healthcare experience and expertise to truly customize options to each individual budget and lifestyle.

Instead of focusing solely on price, We suggest you meet with a hearing care specialist who can not only determine if you have hearing loss and suggest a course of treatment, but work with you every step of the way to improve your quality of life.

"We come at hearing in terms of overall health. We want to build a relationship with you throughout your life. We understand the emotional and financial investment involved, which is why our goal is to keep you hearing your best for as long as we possibly can," Beltone says.

Beltone will provide an honest and clear path for your hearing loss. At Beltone we stand behind everything we do. If you're unhappy with the devices, we don't want you to leave them in the drawer. We set people up for success so they have a positive experience. We know it's an investment, and that's why we're going to take care of you.

TIME TO TAKE YOUR HEARING HEALTH SERIOUSLY

Hearing may be the most underappreciated of the five senses. If you can't see well, of course, you'll visit a licensed eye doctor to get glasses or contacts to correct your vision. But, in this day and age, people are still hesitant to see a hearing care specialist, professionals that are highly trained to treat hearing loss.

"The reasons are endless," says Beltone. "Many of us don't think we're old enough to need hearing aids, or we worry they'll make us look older. Some of us don't think our hearing loss is bad enough to need help, or we're worried about the cost."

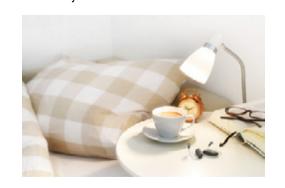

The fact is that even a mild hearing loss may be affecting your brain function, your sense of balance and your relationships with family and friends

"Hearing loss is hard on relationships."

You may think the simple solution is to just turn the TV louder or ask your kids or grandkids to speak up, but even a mild hearing loss can affect you in countless ways. If your hearing is at all impaired, your brain has to work harder, trying to make out words and sounds. A hearing loss can make it harder to interact in social situations, to spend time with family, or to be productive at work. Research has linked untreated hearing loss with cognitive decline, dementia and an increased risk of falls.

THE SOLUTION: Resolve to schedule a free hearing exam. It's quick, easy, and will provide you with the information you need to move forward in life.
