Plymouth Harbormaster Chad Hunter told WCVB-TV ■ "The boat was in the right place at the wrong time" after a whale breached in the harbor and landed smack, dab on a fishing boat, according to the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. Fortunately, no one was hurt and the boat suffered minor damage. Hunter said an abundance of fish attracted both the fishing boats and the whale, noting that "This could have been much worse for all involved ... An incident like this is pretty rare but very dangerous to boaters."

Cats aren't for everyone, but those who love them really love them. Cat people will put up with just about anything to keep their feline overlords happy. And it turns out that Florida really loves its cats. Orland and Ft. Lauderdale rank in the top four cities for cat lovers, according to the good folks at LawnStarter. Unfortunately, we Hoosiers were more toward the bottom of the litter box. Indianapolis was ranked 108th out of 200 and Ft. Wayne was even lower. And for those who care, International Cat Day is Monday.

Let me be upfront here. I voted for the guy that seems to be the most loved / most hated man in America. If he and Joe Biden are the only two choices on the ballot, I'll vote for him again (and I am desperately hoping for better choices by then)

But this aforementioned idolization and intense hatred of the guy is getting ridiculous.

Is he the greatest president we've ever had?

Sorry, Trumpers, but you can't say that.

is to recreate the environment around Malpelo, a UNESCO world heritage island off of the coast of Colombia. Aquariologists photographed the underwater environment around Malpelo so they could sculpt rock-like formations in the Nausicaa aquarium, and to record the species of coral and fish that live there.

As Malpelo is a UNESCO site, no fishing is allowed within 62 miles. Thus, the aquariologists had to collect their animals elsewhere in the world: Portugal, Australia, Kenya, and a fishery in Vero Beach, Florida.

This led to one point of discussion following the film: are the aquariologists really recreating Malpelo if the animals came from elsewhere in the world? Is a Kenyan or Australian hammerhead shark really the same species as one from Malpelo? The aquarium is filled with Atlantic sea water, but the Atlantic Ocean is saltier than the Pacific. Presumably, animals would evolve differently in a different environment.

The audience was also concerned with predators placed in the same (albeit enormous) tank with prey. All of the animals are fed daily, but won't the predators still be predators? Well-fed house cats still chase mice. In nature, the predators keep down the number of prey. Then if there are too few prey, the predators die off. But at Nausicaa the predators are still fed. How will the numbers of prey

The JUMP program is designed to be a one-onone mentoring program for kids in our community. The goal is to offer those kids a positive role model and a chance to experience things they may not otherwise get a chance to do! The mentors also get a chance to connect with a youth, have fun and get out and do things they might not do if they weren't mentoring a child. It is a win/win for both sides of the equation.

Jill Hampton stated, "I love seeing the kids and their families having summer fun along side of their mentors. It really is a program meant to benefit the entire family so it is fitting to see everyone together for this event each year. We had a great time with over 60 people attending."

The JUMP program can always use adult volunteers 21 and over to match with the kids on the waiting list. Also, if there are children who could use a mentor, please make sure to get them involved as well.

To be a part of the JUMP program, contact Jill Hampton at 362-0694 ext. 103 or email jill@ mcysb.org.

Doctors And Hospitals Push Back On Abortion Bi

By: Casey Smith A Republican-backed bill that would ban virtually all abortions in Indiana enters the next round of debate Tuesday, while hospitals and physicians across the state push back against the proposal.

Senators debated the bill for more than three hours on Saturday before voting to advance the bill to the House during a special legislative session. Senate Bill 1 seeks to ban abortion at conception except for narrow exceptions for fatal fetal anomalies, rape, incest and the life of the mother.

Lawmakers in the House are scheduled to take up the measure in a day-long committee hearing Tuesday.

Republican House Speaker Todd Huston said Monday there are "a lot of issues that were brought up" in the Senate. Now, lawmakers in the House "want to take a closer look at" those ideas and con-

"We're going to come forward with what we think is the best, thoughtful policy that protects life and supports women and children across the state," Huston said Monday. "It needs some work. And I'm confident that (the committee) will do the work to improve it.'

The Indiana Hospital Association, which represents more than 170 hospitals across the state, called for the General Assembly to ensure "physician protections" as lawmakers debate Indiana's response to the U.S. Court decision overturning Roe v. Wade.

Association President Brian Tabor said in a statement Friday that the organization is "concerned" that Indiana is "creating an atmosphere that will be perceived as antagonistic to physicians."

"As state-level decisions continue to unfold, we caution our public officials from sending signals that could further exacerbate our health care workforce shortage and threaten access to care," he said. "We urge lawmakers to protect all medical professionals from liability and other repercussions when working in good faith to comply with state laws while providing lifesaving care to Hoosier moms and babies."

The Indiana State Medical Association echoed similar concerns.

"Indiana cannot have an effective health care system if the training and expertise of physicians is not respected and they are under constant threat of political interference for practicing medicine and assisting their patients," said ISMA executive vice president Julie Reed.

IU Health, Indiana's largest health care network, said it also wants to "ensure" that physicians and patients "have clarity when making decisions about pregnancy. That includes the ability to address not only life-saving interventions, but also to intercede when a pregnant woman's health is at risk and to make sure providers are not criminalized when

"The bill's restrictions on a physician's ability to do what is medically proven and appropriate for the health and life of a pregnant patient, plus the threat of criminalization, impact our ability to provide safe and effective patient care and could deter physicians seeking to live and practice healthcare in Indiana," the hospital system said in a statement Saturday.

Doctors push back, too The statements build on opposition from numerous doctors who testified against the bill in the Senate last Doctors and nurses, representing groups including the Indiana State Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics and the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, all opposed the measure.

Maternal-fetal medicine specialist Dr. Mary Abernathy said an abortion ban will increase maternal and infant mortality.

"My concern is that OB-providers in rural areas will simply decide to stop providing maternity care or choose never to restart with our program," Abernathy said. "I fear that they will become worried that they might run afoul of the law, somehow."

Dr. Amy Caldwell, an OBGYN representing the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, said her colleagues are "fearful to do their jobs," noting that language in the bill is "unclear" and could put in jeopardy the licenses of medical professionals who perform abortions for any reason.

House Speaker Todd Huston announced the following schedule for the Indiana House of Representatives during the week of Aug. 1.

Tuesday, Aug. 2

9 a.m. Courts and Criminal Code committee meeting on Senate Bill 1, the abortion-restricting bill, in the House Chamber. Members of the public will be allowed to provide testimony at this time.

9 a.m. Ways and Means will hear Senate Bill 2, the wraparound services bill, in Room 404. Public testimony will be taken.

The House will convene for session 30 minutes after the conclusion of the hearing on SB 1.

Wednesday, Aug. 3 No House Session Thursday, Aug. 4 9 a.m. House session —

At this stage, lawmakers may offer, debate and vote on amendments to the bill. Filed amendments will be available for review at iga. in.gov. Friday, Aug. 5 9 a.m. House Session — The House will convene for bill(s) on third reading. Debate on those bills will occur at this stage, and a final vote is expected to be taken on them.

"Our goal is to reduce the number of abortions. The solution is not to ban them," Caldwell said, emphasizing that the solution is access to "comprehensive contraception."

Bill author Sen. Sue Glick, R-LaGrange, said Saturday she hopes those concerns are addressed in the House, emphasizing her worry that the current bill "interferes" with doctor-patient relationships.

Committee Chairperson Wendy McNamara, R-Evansville, did not indicate how long the committee expects to hear testimony on the bill, saying only that public comments will be heard "throughout the day."

"We want people who can come here to the Statehouse to testify to be able to share their stories and share their interpretations of what the experiences might be in their life," she said. "This is a contentious issue. It's an emotional issue. We want to make sure that we're exceptionally thoughtful as we go through the entire process.

Huston added that this is a topic that has already "been talked about for a long time," referring to the roughly six hours of testimony heard on the proposal in the Senate last week.

"At some point, you have to move forward with the process," he said.

The House speaker said the abortion bill was sent to the courts committee rather than to the Public Health Committee — because he "felt like it was the appropriate place to put it." "A lot of the subject matter that's being discussed — the code cites and those types of things — are topics in code that chairwoman McNamara and the rest of the committee are used to," Huston said.

Huston and McNamara said they expect additional amendments to the bill, but neither would say specifically what changes the House committee or full chamber might propose.

Both lawmakers said they thought exceptions for abortions in cases of rape and incest should remain in the bill. An amendment to strip the bill of the hot-button exception — which sets an 8-week limit on abortion for those age 16 or older - failed in the Senate last McNamara additionally signaled possible changes to the bill's requirement for women to submit a notarized affidavit to their doctor to access an abortion in cases of rape or incest.

'That topic is definitely up for discussion, and one that I would say is probably pretty contentious," she said. "We want to make sure we're conscientious of those people who experience trauma in rape and incest situations.'

Hoosiers Eye Sterilization As Abortion Ban Moves

By: Whitney Downard

With an abortion ban almost certain following the Senate passage of a bill on Saturday, some Hoosiers are turning to long-term contraceptives, like IUDs, while others consider a more permanent option: sterilization.

Katie McHugh, an obstetrician-gynecologist and abortion provider in Indianapolis, said she has heard more people talking about seeking the procedure since the U.S. Supreme Court overturned federal abortion protections in late June.

"Most of the patients that I am seeing for abortion care are saying, 'I will never put myself in this position again because in the future I may not be able to choose abortion," she said. "My colleagues are seeing an increase in requested surgical consults in their offices."

McHugh said currently a majority of her practice is abortion care but she performs the full scope of reproductive healthcare, including sterilization and delivery.

Sterilization or tubal ligation, commonly referred to as "getting your tubes tied," cuts the fallopian tube which connects the ovaries, where egg cells reside, from the uterus, where an embryo may implant and grow.

In recent years, tubal ligation has evolved to tubal removal, or salpingectomy, which extracts the entire tube, rather than leaving two severed ends, and reduces a person's risk for ovarian cancer, as analyzed in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology. Under a ligation, a patient could possibly find a specialist to repair the fallopian tube but couldn't do so with a tubal removal, though the Mayo Clinic reports that reversals aren't always effective. Unlike a hysterectomy, which completely removes the uterus, patients can still get their periods with a tubal removal and, rarely, use in vitro fertilization to implant a fertilized egg and potentially give birth. Tubal ligations and removals are considered an irreversible method of contraception and a permanent form of sterilization.

Paternalism in healthcare limits options for parents

Some doctors won't perform the procedures at all, while others require patients seeking the procedure to already have children or support from their partner.

A 2010 research article surveyed 1,154 OBGYNs and reported that as many as 70% of physicians "would attempt to dissuade her, depending on her characteristics.'

Over half, 59%, of physicians would discourage a 26-year-old patient whose partner disagreed but that percentage fell to 47% if the patient was 36 years old.

For a patient whose partner agreed, 32% would discourage the 26-year-old patient while just 10% would discourage the 36-year-old. McHugh, the Indianapolis OBGYN, said she would assist a patient regardless of their partner's buy-in or number of children. McHugh, along with 40 other Hoosier OBGYNs, appears on a crowd-sourced and widely shared list of doctors who will perform the procedure across the country regardless of "marital status or number of children."

"Not every patient has that experience with every physician. Different physicians have different feelings about that and some physicians feel strongly that the partner should be included or that a patient should have already had children in order to make these decisions," McHugh said. "That is not based on any guidance or evidence...

without mincing words, it is a function of misogyny in medicine and paternalism."

Paternalism, as McHugh uses it, occurs "when a physician or other healthcare professional makes decisions for a patient without the explicit consent of the patient," according to the Missouri University School of Medicine. Doctors may believe they know their patient's wants better than their patient.

Doctors may refuse to perform the surgery on a patient because they believe they will regret it later or find a new partner who wants children. This practice of considering the partner's wants isn't common for those who seek vasectomies, which are also considered a permanent form of sterilization.

"What we know from medical literature, as well as an outpouring of personal stories... is that most patients have to shop around to find a physicians that will listen to them and believe them when they say they don't want to be a parent or that they feel their family size is complete," McHugh said. "That's the real tragedy - for a patient to feel that their physician is not hearing them and doesn't respect their choice."

Risks of sterilization lower than childbirth

McHugh said conversations with her patients on reproductive healthcare revolve around their decisions about their bodies – from their fertility to their ideal family size and parenting plans – as well as their careers and life goals.

When people come to me and they talk about, 'I never wanted to be a parent; that's not going to change. I want this surgery so that I never have to worry about that.' That is a completely valid and respectable position to take," McHugh said. "I have no issues discussing that and planning for that surgery.

Like any surgery, tubal removal comes with risks, including risks with anesthesia, blood clots, bleeding or infection, and possible damage to surrounding organs, including the uterus, bowel or bladder.

"I would never say that abortion does not have some risk – although in comparison to childbirth, it is exponentially safer,' McHugh said. "(Tubal removal) is not a procedure to be taken lightly... but it is certainly a safer procedure than undergoing a full pregnancy with all of the changes that happen in pregnancy and then the risks with delivery."

Indiana has the third-highest maternal mortality rate in a country with the worst maternal health in the developed world. According to the Indiana Maternal Mortality Review Committee, 60 Hoosiers died in 2019 during or up to a year following a pregnancy. In comparison. just two people died in the country in 2018 due to complications from a legal abortion.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention do not report current numbers for deaths associated with tubal sterilizations, but reported 29 deaths between 1977 and 1981, with 11 deaths due to complications with general anesthesia.

Expense of procedure, consent form a hurdle for

Despite the relative safety of the procedure, the cost can be prohibitive since some insurances don't cover the full cost, which includes a full operating room and anesthesia.

To reduce the cost, some patients opt to schedule their tubal removal during their deliverv, which McHugh said is the most convenient time for both the parent and the medical team.

McHugh said the uterus is much bigger than normal postpartum, making it more accessible for the physician. The tubal removal can be scheduled at the same time for someone receiving a Cesarean section, or C-section. For a vaginal delivery, the removal can be scheduled the next day under an epidural rather than general anesthesia, making it a safer procedure.

"Those are very accessible, very cost-effective times to do it because you're already in the hospital and all of the charges are covered under the fee schedule covering the delivery," McHugh said.

But for patients using Medicaid, which covered 39% of Indiana births in 2020, they must complete a consent form 30 days before the procedure, which complicates the timing for thousands of parents who qualify for emergency Medicaid during their pregnancy.

"This really basic and simple reproductive care procedure is made more complicated by our governmental processes," McHugh said.

A marker outside of the Indiana Statehouse acknowledging the toll of Indiana's eugenics laws in the 1900s (Photo from the Indiana Historical Bureau)

The 30-day waiting period stems from the atrocities of Indiana's eugenics laws, starting in 1907 and ending in 1974. Over 2,300 Hoosiers were involuntarily sterilized to discourage "reproduction by the feeble-minded," including those incarcerated - whether in jail or in an asylum - and "epileptics."

According to the University of Vermont, Indiana's sterilization efforts disproportionately targeted "Ishmaelites," or Black Americans recently freed or who had escaped slavery, Native American tribe members and the poor. Medicaid coverage in Indiana seeks to provide healthcare for the poor, many of whom are people of color.

To deter physicians who might encourage their patients to be sterilized, the consent form requires 30 days between signatures and the procedure, now a national standard recognized by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Indiana also requires Hoosiers seeking sterilization procedures be at least 21 years old and competent to make medical decisions.

Doctors anxiously await final bill

For now, doctors wait for legislators to make the final decision on abortion. Lawmakers have repeatedly said the abortion ban isn't designed to change Hoosier access to contraception, but advocates have concerns. Republican senators turned down an amendment guaranteeing access to contraception last week.

"I'm very concerned and I am paying very close attention to what they are doing because I feel intensely scared about the ability to decide what happens to my body; 'm scared about my patients abilities to decide what happens to their bodies," McHugh said. "I fear what this means for all of our privacy and all of our health care in the future."

Anti-Robocall Litigation Task Force Formed

After years of fighting intrusive robocalls, Indiana Attorney General Todd Rokita said that Indiana is one of the leaders of the nationwide Anti-Robocall Litigation Task Force, which will include 50 attorneys general.

The task force will investigate and take legal action against the tele-communications companies responsible for bringing a majority of foreign robocalls into our country. This bipartisan national task force has one goal: to stop illegal robocalls.

"Robocalls aren't just a Hoosier problem. They are a nationwide problem," Rokita said. "That is why I am proud to lead my fellow attorneys general in the fight against these scammers and robocallers. If the telecom industry won't police itself, this unprecedented task force will."

The new task force, led by Indiana, Ohio, and North Carolina attorneys general, has issued 20 civil investigative demands to 20 gateway providers and other entities that are allegedly responsible for a majority of foreign robocall traffic. Gateway providers that bring foreign traffic into the U.S. telephone network have a responsibility to ensure the traffic is legal, but these providers are not taking sufficient action to stop robocall traffic. In many cases, they appear to be intentionally turning a blind eye in exchange for steady revenue. The task force will focus on the bad actors throughout the telecommunications industry to help reduce robocallers' assault on Hoosiers.

Rokita is committed to stopping illegal and unwanted calls. According to the National Consumer Law Center and Electronic Privacy Information Center, over 33 million scam robocalls are made to Americans every day. These scam calls include Social Security Administration fraud targeting seniors, Amazon scams targeting consumers, and many other scams harassing all consumers, including some of our most vulnerable citizens. An estimated $29.8 billion dollars was stolen through scam calls in 2021. Most of this scam robocall traffic originates overseas.

AG Todd Rokita

"I am a strong defender of our nation's borders in every aspect," Rokita said. "This philosophy applies to foreign robocallers and scammers who also attack our country through telecommunication and attempt to take advantage of our people's good nature."

The task force is focused on shutting down the providers that profit from this illegal scam traffic and refuse to take steps to otherwise mitigate these scam calls. The targeted entities are responsible for 60% of robocalls.

Rokita offers the following tips to avoid scams and unwanted calls:

- Be wary of callers who specifically ask you to pay by gift card, wire transfer, or cryptocurrency. For example, the Internal Revenue Service does not accept iTunes gift cards.
- Look out for prerecorded calls from imposters posing as government agencies. Typically, the Social Security Administration does not make phone calls to individuals.
- If you suspect fraudulent activity, immediately hang up and do not provide any personal information.
- Contact our Consumer Protection Division at 1-888-834-9969 or donotcall@atg.in.gov.

glass, and cardboard models of their own private study, inspired by Wallace. Along the way, ArchiCamp exposes them to careers in history, architecture, preservation, and archaeology.

"We've found Archi-Camp introduces young people to the community in a way that might have a lasting impact," says Larry Paarlberg, executive director of the General Lew Wallace Study. "It helps them look critically at buildings and how they are put together and really instills a local pride of place."

Near Terre Haute, Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College was also honored. The school has made historic preservation an important component in the vitality of its campus, leveraging its landmark buildings in strategic planning, fundraising, and tourism efforts. In 2009, the liberal arts college's President Dottie L. King, Ph.D., consulted with staff from the Indiana Division of Historic Preservation and Archaeology and Indiana Landmarks on the implications of listing the college in the National Register of Historic Places and its impact on plans for future stewardship.

Aided by grants from Indiana Landmarks Partners in Preservation program, Saint Mary-ofthe-Woods College and Sisters of Providence nominated the Saint Mary-of-the-Woods Historic District—encompassing 131 acres and 66 structures built between 1844 and 1969—to the National Register. The successful listing 2017 spurred the groups to broaden awareness of the historic campus, including sponsoring talks, tours, and exhibits showcasing its architecture.

Increased awareness of its heritage led the college to rehabilitate the campus's iconic entrance gate and nearby gatehouse, adapted to serve as a welcome center for visitors. Now, restoration is underway in the auditorium of the 1913 Conservatory of Music, which hosts campus theater, chorale, and other music programs. The historic district's National Register status enabled Saint Mary-of-the-Woods to apply for grants from the federal Historic Preservation Fund used for both projects.

"At a time when other colleges in Indiana have chosen to demolish historic campus buildings, it is impressive to see a small college with a commitment to historic preservation," says Marsh Davis, president of Indiana Landmarks.

"By discovering what treasures these buildings are, we've been able to weave individual building stories into fundraising efforts, making once inhibitive renovations part of strategic planning that restores function to underutilized spaces," says President King. "We want to invite people to the Woods as we refurbish these buildings."

Established in 1976, the Sandi Servaas Memorial Award honors the dynamic spirit and contributions of former Indiana Landmarks staffer Sandi Servaas, who was working to raise public awareness and support for preservation at her untimely death in 1975. As winners of the youth-serving category, The Lew Wallace Study Preservation Society receives a check for $1,000. Organizational winner Saint Mary-ofthe-Woods receives $2,000. Both organizations receive the original sculpture "No Doors to Lock Out the Past" by Evansville sculptor John McNaughton.

The measure of a president can't completely be made until they've been out of office a while - longer than this. It takes time to see what impacts different programs they spearheaded had. From the initial looks of it, Trump did a lot of things good for this country. How good, and how does that rank historically? We'll know in a few more years.

In the meantime, the Democrats and others keep fanning the flame of hatred. We're at a point where Trump could find a cure for cancer and there'd be something wrong with it. Think not? Remember it was Trump who fast-forwarded the vaccine while leading Democrats screamed from the rooftops that they would not take a vaccine under Trump or his FDA.

Meanwhile, say anything that even remotely questions the ex-president and his supporters come out of the woodwork after you. Believe me on that one, I've got the e-mails to prove it.

Has there been a president in our lifetimes who inspired such loyalty, such hate?

Not that I can think of. Frankly, I have advocated for a pro-business president for a long time - dating back to Ross (I'm Ross, you're the boss) Perot. This country has had too many politicians for far too long. We're so far off course it's no longer funny, it's tragic. From the insane debt we are handing future generations to the purposeful dividing of the country to the term after term after term incumbents who have never held a real job (and gotten rich off our backs) . . OK, let's stop there. We all know this list could go on and on. So how about if we just say that our country is on a bad path that will not end well unless something dramatic changes. And a presidential election that further rips this country apart isn't it.

Thing is, it's not up to the Dems and the GOP. It's up to us.

It's. Up. To. Us. It's! Up! To! Us! I think if the idiot leaders of both parties continue like this, and if a really viable alternative throws their hat in the ring, we might see the first non-Democrat or non-Republican president since the 1800s.

But more importantly than what happens in 2024 is what is happening now. We need, very much NEED with all capital letters, Americans to remember that the office is the bigger deal, not the man or woman. The country is the bigger deal, not the party. There is no party without the country and unless both the left and right stop trying to divide us further for their own gain, there may well not be a country.

We, as in we the people, need to be the adults in the room. If we haven't learned by now that the hired hands in Washington aren't going to be, then stick the proverbial dunce cap on our heads and sit us in the corner. We need to remember a lesson many of us learned a long time ago – life ain't always fair and sometimes we just have to deal with

It doesn't matter what Trump said or did. It doesn't matter what Biden says or does. We're stuck with both whether we like it or not. But going forward? Going forward we have a choice.

Here's hoping we make that choice with clear heads and open hearts, not political bias and hatred.

This led to discussion of the aquariologists having trained each species of animal to recognize their specific symbol when it was their time to be fed. The manta rays were fed from a red bucket. The hammerhead sharks were fed from a white tube. Another animal's cue was a checkerboard. Another's was a yellow striped tube. The symbols, plus the daily feeding, trained the animals to wait their turns and not fight over the food. The food was dropped over the side of the aquarium, not fed directly from a diver. Thus, the animals (especially the sharks!) did not learn to associate divers with food, and divers who needed to do repairs or clean the windows were left in peace.

The perennial question, whether it is alright to trap animals in aquariums or zoos, generated quite a bit of discussion. Some felt that it was not right, especially placing predators and prey in the same tank. One analogy was made with the Pope on his recent visit to Canada to apologize for the Catholic Church having taken First Nations peoples from their homes and families, to "give them a better life". Is this aquarium really much different?

Others felt that the scientific findings justified the creation of the artificial ocean environment. At one point in the film the aquariologists are quoted as saying that they were creating "a living picture to make visitors dream". How many little children will visit Nausicaa and want to grow up to be aquariologists, naturalists, or environmentalists?

For the next, and final, Green Issues film for the summer of 2022, we move from the ocean's depths to the Arizona desert, with Into the Canyon. The filmmaker and a friend hike the 750mile length of the Grand Canyon, exploring human endurance, the ecology of the canyon, and the threats that it faces from climate change and human intervention.
