➡ THREE THINGS You Should Know:

Rats are overwhelming New York City in the end days of the covid pandemic, reports the Association of Mature American Citizens [AMAC]. It's gotten so bad that the mayor has posted a want ad for the city's own Pied Piper -- someone who can lure rats to their death with or without a magic flute. It is estimated that the rat population has grown to as many as 35 million since the start of the covid pandemic. New York's Director of Rodent Migration will need "the drive, determination and killer instinct needed to fight the real enemy -- New York City's relentless rat population," according to the city's want ad.

Avian influenza has been confirmed in snow geese and other water birds from western Gibson County. Diagnostic testing on carcasses collected there was done at the National Veterinary Services Lab. More than 100,000 snow geese are currently present in western Gibson County. Approximately 700 geese, primarily snow geese, have recently been found dead. Indiana is one of multiple states in which the current strain of avian influenza has been confirmed this fall.

Indiana DNR will increase Chinook salmon stocked in Lake Michigan by 50,000 starting this spring, per Lake Michigan Committee agreement. The change will increase the annual production target for Chinook from 225,000 to 275,000. Baitfish populations have rebounded from an all-time low in the mid-2010s after lake-wide stocking reductions made by all state agencies during the past decade. Ben Dickinson, Indiana DNR's Lake Michigan biologist, says the improved predator-prey balance in the lake allows for the increase, which should benefit anglers, but biologists will be monitoring for the need for future adjustments.

Feet On The Floor

I put my feet on the floor, first thing in the morning, and take a look at them.

They are not the most attractive feet, that's just a fact.

I have big feet and skinny ankles and it doesn't take a lot of imagination to see how much they resemble duck feet, but I try not to dwell on it. The point is, they are good, stable feet. They don't hurt and they carry me on my daily walk, and I am grateful to have themeven if they are a little bigger and less attractive than they might be.

Then I get out of bed and have more to be grateful for.

I might be a little stiff, but I have no major pains. I feel rested and ready for a cup of coffee and, for all of that (especially the coffee), I am grateful.

Lately, my husband, Peter, had been getting up before me. But whether he is up first, or I am, Peter always has the coffee made. He gets it ready the night before, so I will never be without coffee. I tell people that I have forgotten how to make coffee, being married to Peter for almost eight years, and everyone assumes I am kidding. I am not. I honestly don't remember how much coffee goes with how much water. They call this "learned helplessness" in psychology, and it certainly describes me. But Peter takes good care of me and makes sure I never run out of coffee, so I guess I don't really need to know.

I have my coffee and Peter has his and we don't talk to each other too much. I might be feeling chatty, but I know Peter is not first thing in the morning. If I ask him what he thinks about something, he will say, "I'm not awake yet." So I save up all the interesting things I want to tell him for later in the day. Instead. I drink my coffee and write in my journal and try to remember what it was I wanted to get done in this new day. I usually write down the things I am feeling grateful for-like my feet or my coffee or a good night's sleep. I am grateful that I have fun things to work on and things to look forward to. I am grateful for my family and my health and having Peter here beside me (even if he is quiet) always making coffee for me.

Later in the morning, I will work to make myself marginally more presentable and do my pushups-which I always hate, but keep doing. But every day, almost without exception, I take at least a moment to remember how fortunate I am.

I think it's good to start the day out looking at my feet on the floor. It's good to be reminded how dependent I am on them, how often I take them for granted, how different my life would be if I could not jump up and go wherever I wanted. It's good to be reminded that another day has passed, and my feet are one day older, even if the rest of me stubbornly resists admitting this.

For one moment. as my feet are on the ground and I am in that place that is not quite out of bed and not quite in, I remember how blessed every morning is and that, if I'm lucky, I'll get to live out at least one more day and see my fe on the floor tomorrow. Till next time, Carrie

The Lincoln School For Colored Children

EDITOR'S NOTE: In 1881 Crawfordsville School Trustees ordered a school be built at the southwest corner of Spring and North Walnut Streets to serve black students in grades 1-8. Once graduated, the students attended the integrated Crawfordsville High School. This site accommodated the vast majority of black families living in Crawfordsville's north end. Trustees purchased the lot in September 1881 for $2,000. On Dec. 3, 1881, Hinckley and Norris won the contract to build the building for $6,400. The architects designed a plain two-story red brick structure with playgrounds for all the black children who resided in that area. Lincoln School officially opened in September 1882 with 42 students. When the black population moved to the east end to work in the factories, Lincoln Building 1 was renovated into Horace Mann, and Lincoln Build 2 was opened on East Wabash Avenue. That building became Lincoln Rec Center and was demolished in 1981. This project began as a project historical research project to honor all those individuals who went to school in separate and unequal facilities as the Thomas Eubank was born on 4 February 1890/11 March 1890 in Mount Hermon, Monroe County, Kentucky, to parents who were also born in Kentucky.

In 1930, he married Dovie Cecelia Martin, born on 18 April 1918. The couple had at least six children: Grace.

Department, then as an elevator operator in the Crawford and Monon Hotels. He worked as the building caretaker for Lincoln School, Crawfordsville High School, and several elementary schools. According to former students," Mr. Eubank was a gentleman. The school always had shiny and clean floors."

In 1942, at age 52, Tom registered for the World War II draft. It is unclear if he saw action. His son William, age 25, also signed up for the draft while working at the Coca-Cola Bottling Company on Lafayette Avenue.

Dovie was born near Temple Hill, Kentucky, where she married Tom in 1930 and kept their home on a farm for seven years. She worked as a domestic for several Crawfordsville families.

Thomas died on 14 March 1893 in Cook County, Illinois, and was returned to Crawfordsville for burial. Dovie died on 2 August 1962. Emma June Ross

Love Barker 1899 - 1961 Educator 1944 to 1947

Emma June Ross was born on 22 June 1899 in Richland Township, Indiana. Her father, William, was a coal miner. Mary Ann Roberts was her mother. William and Mary Ann married on 4 November 1890 and raised a family of seven children, June being the fifth. By the time June was one year old, the family was living in Parke County, Indiana. In 1910, the family listed their home as Otter Creek, Vigo County. By 1920, June had moved into Terre Haute and boarded with Thomas and Barbara Scott, her cousins.

June married Eugene Thomas Love, a dentist by trade, on 17 June 1921 in Whitmanville, Michigan. Eugene was born on 20 August 1899 in Kentucky. According to his World War I draft registration, he was tall with a medium build, brown hair, and eyes. The couple lived in Adams Township of Parke County and Otter Creek Township in Vigo County, where June taught at the District Number Eight School in Vigo County. Crawfordsville School District hired June to teach the elementary grades at Lincoln School from 1944 to 1947. While living in Crawfordsville, June and Eugene lived at 309 South Oak Street.

Unfortunately, Eugene died from pneumonia on 2 November 1928, leaving June alone with three children to raise; Eugene Junior, Helen, and Louella Marie. One son, Charles, was stillborn on 17 July 1923. Her daughter Helen married Jerry Eubank and remained in Crawfordsville, linking June to Crawfordsville's Eubank family.

The Indianapolis Recorder 27 May 1944 covered the school musical directed by June and Lillian Porter. The children played flutes, Madonna Chandler directed, and Norman Chandler, a first-grade pupil of Miss Porter, played a piano solo. June's community service activities included the Aid Society of the Evangelical United Brethren, the Hillsdale Rebecca Lodge, the Parent Teacher Association, and the Women's Society of the World Services. After Lincoln School permanently closed its doors at the end of the 1946-47 school year, June began teaching primary grades in the Indianapolis Public Schools at School 83. At some point, June remarried a gentleman with the last name Barker.

June died in August 1961 in Indianapolis, Indiana, at 62.

June's daughter. Louella Marie, born in 1925, blazed a trail of firsts in her lifetime. She became the first African-American to be awarded a Ph.D. in speech pathology from the University of Connecticut and the first to serve as president of the Connecticut Speech Language Hearing Association. She was the first vice president for professional and governmental affairs of the American Speech Language Hearing Association. She was co-founder and CEO of Shady Brook Language and Learning Center. Her work led to the passage of legislation that mandated licensing of all speech-language pathologists in the state.

2023 Jeep Wagoneer Is A Big Stylish Box Full Of Powerful Luxury

So, let's say for just a moment, that you like the idea of driving a Chevy Suburban, GMC Yukon XL, or Ford Expedition L, but would like another option that's not so common. Maybe you also have an affinity for Jeep heritage including the iconic '90s Grand Wagoneer. I have a suggestion, but it's not going to be cheap. How about the 2023 Jeep Wagoneer?

There are actually two Wagoneers, both subbrands of Jeep that honor the Grand Wagoneer from the '80s and early '90s. The Wagoneer is a direct competitor for the Chevy Suburban, GMC Yukon, and Ford Expedition. Grand Wagoneer, which crosses $100k, goes after the Cadillac Escalade and Lincoln Navigator. Both short- and long-wheelbase models are available. In either form, it is a big bus. The front is dominated by Jeep's trademark seven-slot grille and chrome tow hooks, but see it broadside, and it will take little convincing that the Wagoneer shares basic architecture with the Ram pickup. I mean, 22" wheels look like doughnuts beneath all that sheetmetal. WAG-ONEER lettering with an American flag leaves little doubt of its origins (Detroit). I think the windows are a bit cartoonish, but the rear could have come from the elegant Grand Cherokee.

It may not be a Grand Wagoneer, but the Wagoneer is plenty grand. touchscreen than Chrysler, and this one connects easily through Apple CarPlay, Android Auto, wireless charging, and a full array of USB formats. Rear passengers can tap into Amazon Fire TV to while away long hours.

Keeping the entire family-tribe safe is an array of tech. A headup display, flatscreen instruments, and adaptive cruise accompany automatic emergency braking, lane keep assist, and blind spot warning systems. Rear cross path detection and drowsy driver detection help too. Given the Wagoneer L's ample size, semi-automated parallel and perpendicular parking assist plus 360-degree camera are big helps too. Behind the iconic 7-slot grille is the 3.0-liter "Hurricane" twin-turbo inline-six engine delivering 420 horsepower and 468 lb.-ft. of torque through an 8-speed transmission and four-wheel-drive. That and its truck-based frame allow up to 10,000 lbs. of towing capacity – enough for a sizable RV or powerboat. Fuel economy, as you might expect, is not especially frugal at 16/23-MPG city/highway, but certainly not terrible for a full-size SUV. Riding beneath the big boxy body is a sophisticated chassis. The rear trades the Ram's solid axle for a five-link independent suspension that greatly enhances handling and ride smoothness. Bumps are less noticeable, especially given the air suspension that can be raised for more severe off-roading. Semi-active damping balances ride comfort and handling, whether chucking city potholes or wafting down the Interstate.

memorable. Beyond styling, owners will revel in a comfy interior while throttling a powerful turbocharged engine. It's not a new version of the classic Grand Wagoneer. That glory goes to today's Grand Cherokee, but the Wagoneer has much to offer. Given a base price of $58,995, rising to $82,105 as-tested, it better. Storm Forward!

Acres of gray woodgrain are fake, but the heated/ ventilated front seats, heated steering wheel, and heated second row seats are not. Add massagers front and rear under a panoramic sunroof. Alpine audio fills the cabin. Nobody has a more intuitive

Let's Talk About GERD - Gastroesophageal Reflux Disease

I've been asked to re-run my columns about Gastroesophageal Reflux Disease, more commonly known as GERD. That long name describes acid from the stomach (gastro) is found in the tube that connects the mouth to the stomach (esophagus) and goes in a backward direction (reflux).

Once again, it's helpful to know the anatomy when trying to understand a medical condition (see top diagram). The esophagus is a muscular tube that contracts in a rhythmic fashion to move food from just below the back of the mouth to the stomach. The esophagus passes through the diaphragm, the muscular dome that separates the chest and abdomen. The diaphragm helps form the lower esophageal sphincter (LES) that acts as a valve to keep acid in the stomach. Food passes through the LES into the stomach where it is mixed with acid to start breaking the food down for digestion.

It is estimated that between 14 and 20 percent of adults in the U.S. are afflicted with GERD. These estimates are based on surveys of patients who report heartburn, the primary symptom of GERD. The medical definition of GERD is "a condition which develops when the reflux of stomach contents causes troublesome symptoms (i.e., at least two heartburn episodes per week) and/or complications."

The incidence of GERD is increasing in the United States. The reasons are not completely clear, but it is presumed to be due the rising number of overweight and obese individuals. However, normal weight individuals can suffer from GERD.

A Hiatal hernia (bottom diagram) can lead to GERD. This condition occurs when the top part of the stomach "herniates" or pushes up through the hole in the diaphragm. When this occurs, the lower esophageal sphincter moves up away from the diaphragm, relaxes, and is not as effective at keeping food and acid in the stomach.

Additional risk factors for GERD include low muscular tone of the LES, loss of normal muscular function of the esophagus, excess production of stomach acid, delayed emptying of the stomach, and overeating. Alcohol can reduce the effectiveness of the LES. Fatty or fried foods, coffee, tea, caffeinated drinks, chocolate, and mint are all foods that can cause or worsen GERD. Smoking cigarettes is also a risk factor and also reduces production of protective mucus in the stomach.

Common symptoms of GERD include heartburn, regurgitation of food, difficulty swallowing and chest pain. Less common symptoms include pain with swallowing, water brash (excessive salivation prompted by acid reflux), sour brash (acid taste in the mouth, particularly when lying down), pain in the upper abdomen, and nausea.

Most people think of GERD as something that just causes heartburn, but it can result in more serious complications.

These can be divided into those that involve the esophagus and those that don't. While most of these produce only symptoms, some can actually cause injury or even lead to cancer.

The lining of the stomach is protected from stomach acid by a thin layer of mucus. The lining of the esophagus, on the other hand, is not designed to withstand constant exposure to stomach acid. When the esophagus is bathed in gastric juices, it can become inflamed and even ulcerated. This condition is called esophagitis and can vary from mild to severe.

Reflux with esophagitis can cause scarring of the wall of the esophagus. This can result in the formation of narrowed areas called strictures. Strictures may result in difficulty swallowing solids and food may feel like it's getting stuck in the middle of the chest. If the strictures are severe the person may even have trouble swallowing liquids.

If cells that line the esophagus are exposed to stomach acid on a frequent basis, they may undergo structural changes to try to protect themselves. Excess acid exposure can also result in a condition called Barrett's esophagus. Barrett's can lead to cancer of the esophagus. The incidence of cancer of the esophagus has increased by a factor of two to six over the last 20 years.

There are also complications of GERD that occur outside the esophagus. If the stomach acid gets high enough in the esophagus, it can spill over into the larynx (voice box) and trachea (windpipe). This can cause a dry cough and also inflammation of the larynx (laryngitis) resulting in hoarseness and an irritating need to clear the throat. It can also trigger, and make asthma more difficult to treat. Acid reflux into the mouth, particularly during sleep, can also cause tooth decay.

Now that you're an expert in what GERD is you're probably asking how to avoid getting it and how to diagnose complications and treat it. Tune in next week for the exciting conclusion!
