to the family came many moons ago when I was Children's Librarian at Crawfordsville District Public Library and was doing a series on our local children's authors. After a wonderful half hour interview on the phone to Beatrice (Freedman) Schenck DeRegniers, I fell in love with not only her books but her whole family as well. Some of her work centered around her memories growing up in our fair city and certainly, Beatrice gave from her heart.

I wrote about her father, Harry, a Crimean-born tailor first with a shop in Lafayette, then moving to Crawfordsville where he owned a clothing store. Another word for this family would have to include adventure as Harry at age 17 left his homeland and with three neighboring families came to America. In 1909, he married Sophia Feinstein and their home here was at 10 Mills Place. They were both philanthropic, Harry one of the founders of the Community Chest, active

His obituary stated, "In his many years as a citizen of Crawfordsville, your name has become a symbol of help to those in need. You have given much of your time, energy and personal finances to humanitarian causes. This you have done from the heart - sincerely and cheerfully - always with the highest integrity and without publicity or acclaim." Freedman, A Selfless Family JUMP Goes To The Zoo

This past Saturday, the mentors and mentees in the JUMP Program had their monthly group activity at the Indianapolis Zoo. In addition to one on one time spent between a mentor and their mentee, the JUMP program offers a free monthly group activity. This helps the mentors and mentees get to know each and it offers them an activity that they can do that is fun and doesn't cost anything.

The Indianapolis Zoo is always a great outing for adults and kids alike," stated Jill Hampton, JUMP Program Manager. "I don't think anyone gets tired of seeing all the animals and being able to get up close and even feed some of them. It's a good time and it's educational."

Mentoring a child is fun and it really does help for a child to get out and experience new things. Mentoring also provides a young person with that extra support from a positive role model. Just spending time doing everyday things can help shape a young person's life.

The JUMP Program can always use volunteers to mentor the children and also kids who could use someone to mentor them. The first step in this process is to contact Jill Hampton at 362-0694 Ext. 103 or email jill@mcysb.org

Young, Shaheen, Cramer Reintroduce Legislation To Address Shortage Of Mental Health Providers In Schools

U.S. Senators Todd Young (R-Ind.), Jeanne Shaheen (D-N.H.), and Kevin Cramer (R-N.D.) reintroduced the bipartisan Mental Health Excellence in Schools Act to address the shortage of mental health providers in schools by boosting the pipeline of graduate students trained to become school psychologists, counselors, and social workers responding to the youth mental health crisis that was worsened by the pandemic. More specifically, this legislation would authorize the Department of Education to partner with higher education institutions to help cover students' costs at relevant graduate programs.

"Providing Hoosier students with access to mental health resources will help improve the safety, well-being, and academic success of our students," said Senator Young. "The Mental Health Excellence in Schools Act will both support the school-based mental health workforce and address the critical need for these professionals."

"Our nation is facing a mental health crisis that's uniquely impacting our young people. To ensure students have access to the care they need, we must ensure access to the mental health professionals in schools to meet kids where they are and assist students dealing with any challenges they may be facing. Unfortunately, we don't have a strong pipeline of mental health providers, leaving many kids and teenagers vulnerable and without the help they need," said

"Like so many fields across the state, there simply aren't enough school-based mental health professionals. Ensuring our kids' well-being and academic success should be our first priority," said Senator Cramer. "Our bill will alleviate the financial strain of earning a graduate degree by encouraging more practitioners to work in schools across the state."

The National Association of School Psychologists (NASP) recommends a ratio of one school psychologist per 500 students. However, the national average ratio is estimated to be approximately one school psychologist per 1,200 students, with wide variation among states.

The Mental Health Excellence in Schools Act seeks to increase the recruitment and retention of mental health services providers in schools. The legislation creates a program for the Department of Education to partner with eligible graduate institutions to cover up to the full cost of school-based mental health graduate programs for students at eligible institutions.

U.S. Representatives Brian Fitzpatrick (R-PA-01) and Jared Golden (D-ME-02) are leading a companion version of this bill in the U.S. House of Representatives.

"Over 38 percent of America's school students do not have adequate access to comprehensive mental health resources," said Congressman Fitzpatrick. "As co-chair of the Bipartisan Mental Health and Substance Use Disorder Task Force, I am proud to introduce the Mental Health in Schools Excellence Act to ensure that students have access to the mental health services they need to flourish."

"Students of all ages in Maine and across the country are facing significant challenges to their mental health," said Congressman Jared Golden. "We must ensure that our public schools have the resources that they need to help these students. I'm proud to join my colleagues in the House and Senate in pushing to address shortages of school mental health professionals by introducing this bill to help cover the attendance costs to attain graduate degrees in school psychology.'

The legislation has been endorsed by the National Association of School Psychologists, the American School Counselor Association, the School Social Work Association of America, the American Counseling Association and the American Psychological Association.

"Schools play a critical role in meeting the mental and behavioral health needs of children and youth. Equipping schools to meet the mental and behavioral health needs of students must be a top priority as we address the ongoing youth mental health crisis," said NASP President, Dr. Celeste Malone. "Unfortunately, we are facing a shortage of school psychologists and other school-based mental health providers, which is impeding schools' ability to meet the growing needs of students and their families. We applaud Senators Shaheen, Young, and Cramer and Congressmen Fitzpatrick and Golden for their leadership in introducing legislation that will help increase the pool of professionals appropriately trained to support our children's learning and mental health in schools.'

Maine Lobster Industry "No Mow May" Explained Under Fire And Firing Back EARTHTALK® groups counter that it is size limits.

EARTHTALK Dear EarthTalk:

Is the Maine lobster industry sustainable and why are the fishermen suing Monterey Bay Aquarium?

When one thinks of Maine, they can't help but think of Maine Lobsters. Lobster has been an integral part of Maine's culture and economy for centuries. In fact, the beginnings of the Maine Lobster industry can be traced back to the colonial settlement of the region in the 17th century, and is one of the oldest continually operating industries in North America. Since then, it has grown to become one of the most iconic industries in the country, and currently contributes over $1 billion to the Maine economy annually via the harvesting of over 100 million pounds of lobster every vear. However, whether or not the Maine lobster industry is environmentally sustainable has come into question in recent years.

The Maine lobster industry touts a fairly sustainable record. It has a number of sustainable fishing practices in place including tail notching (the marking of an egg-bearing female lobster to signify that it cannot be harvested), minimum and maximum lobster size limits and trap Laws to protect Maine lobster populations began in 1872 with the outlawing of harvesting egg-bearing female lobsters. Since then, the industry has continued to project lobster populations as well as other local marine life. The industry claims to have reduced lobster gear entanglements by 90 percent, as well as removed 27,000 miles worth of fishing lines.

Despite these measures, the Maine lobster industry has come under attack lately by environmental groups who claim that the industry's fishing practices are harmful to the endangered North Atlantic right whale. One of these groups, Monterey Bay Aquarium Foundation, changed their sustainability rating of Maine lobster under claims of harm to the right whale, thus discouraging customers from buying Maine's most iconic delicacy. As a result, the Maine lobster industry sued the foundation, arguing that there is no evidence that its fishing practices are to blame for any harm to the endangered whale species.

Environmental groups believe that lobster fishing practices are to blame for right whale deaths, while the lobster industry denies these claims, stating that there have been no right whale deaths traced back to the Maine lobster industry. Environmental difficult to trace deaths back to specific industries or commercial fishermen, so there is no way to prove their innocence. While fishing regulations have been introduced by these groups, Maine politicians have backed the lobster industry and helped to delay the passing of new fishing regulations in order to protect their state's $1.5 billion industry. As it stands, the Maine lobster industry is embroiled in a contentious debate between the survival of an iconic and economically critical industry, and the survival of the local ecosystem and an endangered species.

Dear EarthTalk: What's the background on the "No Mow May" movement?

Lawns cover some 40 million acres-or two percent-of land in the United States, making them the single largest irrigated crop we grow. We mow, rake, fertilize, weed, chemically treat and water them^D—sucking up time, money and other resources. And in spite of all that they provide little if any benefit to wildlife. In fact, they likely do more harm than good. Indeed, grass-only lawns lack floral resources and nesting sites for bees and other pollinators, and serve up a cocktail of toxic pesticides.

Addressing these issues is where the No Mow May campaign comes in, encouraging people to refrain from mowing their lawns during the month of May. The idea is to let wildflowers and other plants grow, providing important habitat for bees, butterflies, and other pollinators. The campaign was started in the United Kingdom by the environmental charity Plantlife in 2018. Since then, it has gained popularity in other countries, including the U.S. and Canada. The goal of No Mow May is to raise awareness about the importance of biodiversity and to encourage people to take action to support pollinators.

Many people mow their lawns frequently, often using gas-powered mowers that emit carbon dioxide and other pollutants. This can be harmful to the environment, as well as to human health. Mowing also destroys wildflowers and other plants that provide food and shelter for pollinators. By refraining from mowing their lawns during the month of May, people can help to create a habitat for pollinators. This can include bees, butterflies, moths and other insects, as well as birds and small mammals that feed on them. These creatures play an important role in pollinating crops, which is essential for the production of many types of food.

No Mow May is not only good for the environment, but it can also be good for your lawn. Allowing wildflowers and other plants to grow can help to improve the health of your soil, reduce erosion, and provide a natural fertilizer. This can lead to a healthier lawn that requires less maintenance over time.

If you decide to participate in No Mow May, there are a few things you can do to ensure that your lawn stays healthy and safe. First, make sure that your lawn is free of any hazards, such as large rocks or debris, that could pose a risk to people or pets. You should also check for any weeds or invasive species that could harm native plants.

During the month of May, you can still perform basic lawn maintenance, such as watering and weeding. You can also mow any areas that are high traffic or that pose a safety risk. However, it's best to avoid mowing any areas where wildflowers or other plants are growing.

No Mow May is just one example of how individuals can take action to support biodiversity and protect the environment. By making small changes in our daily lives, we can help to create a healthier, more sustainable world for ourselves and future generations.

cemetery in Lafayette. Harry and Sophia's three children grew-up here. You know Bea now and there was Lillian who married Abe A. Goldman who has a wonderful story of his own and produced the only Freedman grandchildren, Steve and Kathy. By the way, think this Stephen is the one who had an interesting career as well, being a periodontist (Star Democrat 7 Feb 2021) where he collected and used antique newspapers to tell about a particular theme (Titanic, Wild West, Civil War). Now, in the other two articles on the Freedman family I wrote, I breezed over probably the most interesting of them all, their son and last child, Daniel X, middle name Xander, but mainly called Danny (and thanks to Paul, my genealogy/history buddy for the reminder that Daniel Xander Freedman would make a good article - and indeed he deserves one so here ya' go!). At Lafayette Home Hospital, Dr. D.C. McClelland delivered (17 August 1921) Daniel Xander Freedman whose parents, Harry and Sophia (Feinstein) lived at 324 S. 6th Street in Lafayette. Several biographical listings for Dan Freedman have him born in Crawfordsville, but he was indeed born in Lafayette. He spent some time at private schools (particularly Lake Forest Academy), but also attended CHS for awhile, as well where he was active in public speaking and entertaining, being marked as the "Groucho Marx of CHS," and when he was a Senior his middle name was "finally revealed - it's Xander!" Oh, and Dan carried Groucho with him throughout his whole life as he was quite a talented musician and loved to entertain by singing Marx's "Lydia, the Tattooed Lady."

Dan was little, but mighty, being but 5'2" weighing just 120 pounds, having dark complexion, dark eyes and hair. When he joined the service, he was listed as an actor having two years of college. On his draft card, it notes "X – initial only" but we know that wasn't correct, either. Leaving his studies at Harvard, Dan joined the infantry in WWII, but received a back injury. Then, he volunteered as a "military clinical psychologist," working with hundreds pf brain injured soldiers which convinced him that "extensive research was needed on brain functions." (Oliver, Myrna. LA Times Sat 5 June 1993 p 22). Oliver said that Dan became interested in the human brain at the mere age of 12 due to reading, The Human Mind, by Karl Menninger. Seems each place he turned there was much more to learn!

Toward the end of the war, he married (20 March 1945) in Alabama Mary Neidigh whom he had met in Indiana, becoming friends and confidants, then his wife for 48 years. Although no children of their own, Dan loved children and wanted them all to be the best they could be. He returned to Harvard and graduated, then went on to Yale School of Medicine for 20 years where he became professor of Psychiatry (Lafayette J-C 26 Oct 1983 p 19). Besides here, he was at the University of Chicago (Chairman of the Department of Psychiatry), then on to his last place (UCLA - Prof of Psychiatry and Pharmacology) where his research continued in how drugs entertwined with mental patients, having been the very first to link drugs (such as LSD) and the brain hormone serotonin. (White Plains NY Sun June 6, 1993). Same article noted that Dan was a believer in exhaustive investigation and that his belief in 1970 was that Ritalin and Dexidrene were "probably effective" to treating a child; however another several years of research was still needed to determine such.

This man was amazing in so many ways (holder of more than a dozen national and international awards); published 15 books and over 200 articles on topics of concerns in psychiatry. He served for many years as the chief editor of the American Medical Association's Archives of General Psychiatry which became one of the chief scientific journals ever. President of the American Psychiatric Association, American College of Neuropsychopharcalogy and many such advisory positions were in his repertoire. His approach to working with various brain disorders, functions and the like was quite unique for the time. One-on-one and get to know the patient well. For instance, he might just show-up in a classroom or a home to see how a patient interacted with others, and many noted that they were "rightful heirs of Dr. Dan's" (obit). Bless this adventurous man for giving of himself and his knowledge to the psychiatric world!
