In Perspective: Is LWV Liberal?

The League of Women Voters, open to men as well as women, is a nonpartisan, multi-issue political organization that encourages informed and active participation in government. For information about the Montgomery County LWV, visit: www.lwvmtncoin.org or message to LWV, PO Box 101, Crawfordsville, Indiana 47933.

On Sept. 30, our local League of Women Voters of Montgomery County hosted presidents from other Leagues statewide, during which one president shared that some non-League people believe the League of Women Voters is left-leaning. Her response? The current platform for the LWV looks awfully similar to the GOP platform of 1972. In some ways, that's a risky claim, because it could sound like the LWV holds stodgy stances on their key issues - voting rights like expanding voter access, bi-partisan redistricting, money in politics, health care reform, the environment, the census and immigration, as well as its other active statements on economic justice, equality and the ERA. What it really means is that the League's commitment to non-partisan, pro-democracy work remains its core.

In this coming series, we will evaluate the claim that it's the political parties who've moved their stances away from bipartisan democratic processes, leading to stalemates in Congress.

In this first installment, we will look at the rights of women. Both parties tackled the multitudinous concerns related to women's rights: the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA), civil rights, education, job and wage discrimination, caregiving, Title IX, economic parity and reproductive rights. In some places, we will use precise quotes, in other places we will summarize.

As a matter of introduction, the Dems wrote in 1972: "Women historically have been denied a full voice in the evolution of the political and social institutions of this country and are therefore allied with all under-represented groups in a common desire to form a more humane and compassionate society."

The 1972 Republican Platform opened its section on women's equality "We reaffirm the President's pledge earlier this year: "The Administration will . . . continue its strong efforts to open equal opportunities for women, recognizing clearly that women are often denied such opportunities today. While every woman may not want a career outside the home, every woman should have the freedom to choose whatever career she wishes -- and an equal chance to pursue it. This Administration has done more than any before it to help women of America achieve equality of opportunity."

Regarding the ERA

Originally written by Alice Paul in 1923, the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) passed both houses of Congress in 1972 but did not receive the required 38 state ratifications by 1982. It has

Fall Into Fire Safety: National Fire Prevention Month Highlights Seasonal Precautions For Electrical Safety

Electrical fires occur in homes more in winter than any other season. The National Fire Protection Association reports that more than half of the 45,000 annual electrical fires occur between December and February. The causes of electrical fires can range from damaged wiring, lighting equipment and space heaters, to washer and dryer fans and outdoor and indoor holiday decorations. The falling leaves of October are yet another reminder that as we turn our attention toward spending more time indoors with family and friends, we need to pay extra attention to keeping our homes safe from fires.

"As firefighters and emergency responders, we have the great responsibility of not only helping to educate the public about the dangers of electrical house fires but also about how to proactively prevent them before they start," said Fire Chief John S. Butler, Fairfax County (VA) Fire and Rescue Department and International Association of Fire Chiefs President. "When we collaborate alongside our community, we can reduce injuries, save lives, and prevent property loss. Keeping a home safe from fire takes everyone working together."

Electrical fire experts offer a few simple ways to prevent house fires:

- Be mindful of supplemental electrical needs: Keep portable generators outside, away from windows and as far away from your home as possible. Extension cords should only be used temporarily and be sure to check cords regularly for damage. Have an electrician install additional wall outlets where you need them.

- Use appliances properly: Follow the manufacturer's instructions on where and how to use appliances. Remember to unplug all appliances when not in use. Make sure small kitchen appliances are unplugged and allowed to cool before cleaning.

- Don't overload circuits: Plug only one heat-producing appliance (like a space heater) into an electrical outlet at a time.

- Keep home electrical systems up to date: Make sure your home follows all current National Electrical Code requirements for new construction and renovation including use of Arc Fault Circuit Interrupters (AFCIs) to prevent electrical fires.

Arc fault circuit interrupters were created in the 1990s as a direct response to damaged wiring systems that caused thousands of residential fires. In 1999 AFCIs became a National Electrical Code requirement. Today, AFCI breakers provide families with a high level of protection by stopping hazardous arcing conditions before an electrical fire can start.

"Embracing innovations like arc fault circuit interrupters is essential in safeguarding our families and preventing an electrical fire from happening to our homes," said Ashley Bryant Kees, Senior Product Manager, Electronic Circuit Breakers, at Siemens and member of the National Electrical Manufacturers Association LVDE AFCI Task Force. "Proven technologies like these will help protect families, firefighters and communities everywhere during the holidays and beyond."

JUMP Gets Creative

The mentors and mentees from the Youth Service Bureau's JUMP program got creative for their October monthly match activity. The JUMP Program is a mentoring program for local youth to help support them as they grow and change into healthy, productive adults. These youths are matched with a caring adult and meet regularly to hang out and have fun.

One part of the JUMP Program is the free monthly group activities provided by the Montgomery County Youth Service Bureau. The mentors and mentees were able to tap into their creative side this month as Nick from GG Magic and Balloons came to teach them how make balloon creations. Nick walked the group through how to make a balloon dog, flower, sword and other items. "Nick was fun, encouraging and patient with everyone. After 12 years in the business, he is a pro and made this a great afternoon for everyone," said Sara Clapp, program manager.

This is just one example of a fun event that the program offers each month for matches. Our goal is to provide a fun free event for our mentors and mentees to attend if they are available. Our matches meet a minimum of 4 hours a month, in an informal atmosphere in the community or at one of our events. It is a great way for youth and their mentees to have an adventure, learn a new skill or just hang out. Mentoring is a lot of fun and great for kids who need another positive role model in their lives.

There are currently several kids on the waiting list waiting to be matched with an adult volunteer. If you would like to become a part of the JUMP program, contact Sara Clapp at 765-362-0694, ext. 102 or email sara@mcysb.org.

Rust Gives Big To His Campaign For Indiana's Open U.S. Senate Seat, But Banks Tops Total Donations

By Casey Smith
Indiana Capital Chronicle

U.S. Senate candidate John Rust gave big to his own campaign during the third quarter, which he says is a sign that he won't be propped up by political action committees.

Rust, an openly gay Hoosier running as a Republican, has contributed $1.6 million since he officially launched his campaign in September, according to his Federal Election Commission (FEC) filing. He chaired his family's Seymour-based Rose Acre Farms until last month.

He raised only $6,000 in contributions from other individuals, however.

"I'm donating to my campaign rather than loaning to my campaign because I want to work in the United States Senate day one for Hoosiers," Rust told the Indiana Capital Chronicle on Monday. "I won't be going there to just work to pay off my campaign debts. It is very important to me that people know I'm in for this race 100% for Hoosiers. And will not be beholden to the Washington swamp like Jim Banks is."

Although GOP favorite U.S. Rep. Jim Banks was beat on overall fundraising in the third quarter, he continues to amass more individual contributions than Rust and other contenders for Indiana's open Senate seat in the November election. Between July and September, Banks received $417,419 from outside donors and $185,850 from political committees, like PACs.

Since campaigning began, Banks has also raked in more total donations than any other candidate. He has not made any personal contributions to his own campaign, according to federal campaign finance data.

Four Hoosiers — two Republicans and two Democrats — have launched the most serious bids for the U.S. Senate, with each hoping to take Indiana's seat currently held by Sen. Mike Braun.

Braun is leaving the position to run for Indiana governor, opening the doors to a slate of potential successors.

But Banks is the party's favored contender in the race.

The sitting congressman has already earned an endorsement from the Indiana Republican Party for his 2024 U.S. Senate bid — marking the first time in recent history that the state party has made an endorsement before primary elections for an open seat.

Rust, on the other hand, has launched a legal battle to get his name on the ballot. He maintains that a current Indiana law blocking him from the ballot is unconstitutional.

"John Rust is a left-wing millionaire whose longtime Democrat voting record disqualifies him from running as a Republican," Banks told the Capital Chronicle on Monday. "John Rust is suing the state to let him on the ballot at the same time he's being sued for price-gouging hardworking Hoosier families during the pandemic. He should pay back the Hoosier families he swindled instead of using his millions to try to buy a Senate seat."

On the opposing ticket, former state lawmaker and lobbyist Marc Carmichael and Keith Potts, a member of Indianapolis' City-County Council, are both seeking the Democratic nomination.

A spate of additional candidates from a variety of parties have also registered with the FEC. All candidates will have to gather enough signatures to make the ballot.

The primary election is scheduled for May 7, 2024. The general election will follow on Nov. 5, 2024.

Rust vs. Banks
In Indiana's Senate race, Banks raised about

$603,000 in the third quarter, ending the quarter with close $2.7 million cash on hand, according to his FEC filing. That's compared to his $1.2 million raised in the first quarter and nearly $1 million during the second quarter.

Banks, who was first elected to Congress in 2016, has raised about $2.78 million over the course of the campaign.

He reported a total of $420,000 in debt during the latest quarter, after reporting just $32,000 in the second quarter.

Rust only filed a statement of organization with the FEC on July 1, just after the reporting period ended.

His self-funding has so far helped the campaign acquire an RV, print promotional materials and purchase billboard advertising. Rust has additionally received one $6,000 donation from his brother, Anthony, according to FEC filings.

"Jim Banks drinks from the chalice of PAC swamp water in DC with both hands," Rust told the Capital Chronicle. "When career politicians like Mitch McConnell max out donations to Jim Banks, you know he is bought and paid for."

Carmichael, meanwhile, made his candidacy official in June, while Potts announced his Senate run July 6.

Potts reported nearly $66,000 in donations during the third quarter — more than $62,000 he contributed himself. Carmichael has not reported any donations.

Dr. Valerie McCray, a psychologist from Indianapolis, was the first person to file to run in Indiana's 2024 U.S. Senate race, in December 2022. But she has not reported any money raised to the FEC.

Pence low on cash

Former Vice President Mike Pence's presidential campaign raised $3.3 million in the third quarter of this year — of which $150,000 came from his own pocket.

He reported in his latest FEC filing that he has just $1.2 million cash on hand, though, and more than $600,000 in debt.

Pence, also a former Indiana governor, entered the 2024 GOP primary in early June with just three weeks until the end of the second fundraising quarter. His campaign raised just over $1.1 million in that time, while his Committed to America super PAC raised about $2.6 million, according to his federal filing.

The latest numbers fuel ongoing questions about the former vice president's overall path to the nomination and his ability to reach the donor threshold to qualify for the third GOP debate.

The Pence campaign has yet to confirm how many donors contributed during the third quarter, leaving it uncertain whether he will hit the Republican National Committee's threshold needed to qualify for the opening debate in Miami on Nov. 8.

Candidates must have 70,000 individual donors and secure 4% of the vote in either two national polls, or one national poll and two polls from separate early states.

Former President Donald Trump, on the other hand, raised $24.5 million from July to September. That's more than double the amount collected by the campaign of his closest rival in fundraising, Florida Gov. Ron DeSantis, who raised $11.2 million.

Why You Should Invest In Your Skin Health This Winter

(StatePoint) If you're like many people, you may view the change in seasons as a sign that you can give up your skin protection routine. Experts say that everyone, regardless of gender or lifestyle, should be careful not to neglect their skin health in winter.

"Don't let your guard down in winter. Not only are you still being exposed to sunlight and pollution during these colder months, but there are sources of free radicals indoors, too, which may have negative, aging effects on the skin. Free radicals can damage the skin's cell function and DNA, and DNA changes can cause mutations that could increase the risk of skin cancer," says New York City dermatologist, Rachel Nazarian, MD FAAD.

To invest in your skin health this winter, and all year long, Dr. Nazarian offers the following tips:

- Keep up the SPF routine: Don't stow that bottle of sunscreen away. Applying a topical broad spectrum SPF on a daily basis can protect skin while you're enjoying time outdoors, and from the incidental exposure that occurs through a window indoors, like while driving.

- Get inside-out protection: While topical protection is important, ultimate skin health requires a combination of defensive layers. Amp up your skin protection routine with a daily supplement, such as Heliocare. Clinically proven and recommended by 87% of U.S. dermatologists surveyed, this vegan and gluten-free natural dietary supplement has antioxidant effects on the skin and contains Fernblock PLE Technology, a proprietary ingredient that aids in neutralizing the negative effects of free radicals.

"Whether you're a ski bunny or prefer hibernating all winter, there is no time of year when your skin is immune to free radical damage. A popular skin concern, collagen loss, can create signs of aging, like wrinkling, fine-lines and sagging. Since collagen loss is expedited by free radical damage, taking a supplement like Heliocare all year long is an excellent precaution to help your body protect itself from the damaging effects of free radicals," says Dr. Nazarian.

To learn more, visit heliocare.com.

- Put the device down:

Protect your skin from excessive exposure to the visible light emitted from digital screens like cell-phones and laptops. To do so, find small, easy ways to limit your device usage, such as reading a physical book instead of using an e-reader, or by playing records instead of playing DJ on your phone. You can also reduce exposure by simply turning the brightness down on your devices.

- Sleep tight: During sleep, your body works to repair organs, including your skin. Getting high-quality, deep sleep each night is essential for healthy skin and a healthy body. According to The Sleep Foundation, the best temperature for sleep is 65 degrees Fahrenheit, even in winter when it's tempting to turn up the thermostat to toasty temperatures. You can also promote good sleep by keeping alcohol and caffeine consumption in check, and by turning to sleep apps that soothe users into slumber with meditation and white noise.

To help keep skin healthy and radiant, don't neglect it in the winter months. For best results, ensure your care routine is both comprehensive, and year-round.

The Importance Of Mental Wellness For A Healthy Heart And Brain

(Family Features) Research shows anxiety, stress and depression can have a negative impact on physical health and may even increase the risk for heart disease and stroke.

In fact, the American Heart Association, the world's leading nonprofit organization focused on heart and brain health, identified a strong interconnection between the mind, heart and body in its scientific statement, "Psychological Health, Well-Being and the Mind-Heart-Body Connection."

"Research has clearly demonstrated negative psychological factors, personality traits and mental health disorders can negatively impact cardiovascular health," said volunteer chair of the statement writing committee Glenn N. Levine, M.D., FAHA, master clinician and professor of medicine at Baylor College of Medicine and chief of the cardiology section at the Michael E. DeBakey VA Medical Center.

"The body's biological reaction to stress, anxiety and other types of poor mental health can manifest physically through an irregular heart rate or rhythm, increased blood pressure and inflammation throughout the body. Negative psychological health is also associated with health behaviors that are linked to an increased risk for heart disease and stroke, such as smoking, lower levels of physical activity, unhealthy diet, being overweight and not taking medications as prescribed."

Studies have found some people, including people of color, may face a greater risk of poor health outcomes due to chronic stress, depression and anxiety linked to psychosocial stressors, particularly those related to social and economic inequality, discrimination, systemic racism and other societal factors. A study published in the "Journal of the American Heart Association" found U.S. adults who reported feeling highly discriminated against at work had an increased risk of developing high blood pressure compared to those who reported low discrimination at work.

"Mental health includes our emotional, psychological and social well-being," Levine said. "It affects how we think, feel and act. It also helps determine how we handle stress, relate to others and make choices. Practicing mindfulness in all forms allows one to be more aware of and have more control over emotional responses to the experiences of daily life."

Consider these tips from Levine to improve your mind-heart-body connection:

- Practice meditation regularly. Even simple actions such as communing with nature or sitting quietly and focusing on your breath can have a positive impact.
- Get plenty of good, restful sleep. Set a regular bedtime, turn off or dim electronics as bedtime approaches and form a wakeup routine.

- Make connections and stay in touch. Reach out and connect regularly with family and friends, or engage in activities to meet new people.

- Practice mindful movement. There are many types of gentle mindful practices like yoga and Tai chi that can be done about anywhere with no special equipment to help ease your soul and muscles.

- Spend time with your furry friend. Companion animals are often beloved members of the family and research shows pets may help reduce physiological reactions to stress as well as support improved physical activity.

- Work it out. Regular physical activity - a recommended 150 minutes of moderate activity, 75 minutes of vigorous activity or a mix of both weekly - can help relieve tension, anxiety and depression, and give you an immediate exercise "high."

"Wellness is more than simply the absence of disease," Levine said. "It is an active process directed toward a healthier, happier and more fulfilling life. When we strive to reduce negative aspects of psychological health, we are promoting an overall positive and healthy state of being."

since received those but Congress has not ratified it officially. Both parties supported the ERA in 1972.

2023 LWV- "The LWV has fought hard for passage and ratification of the ERA since the 1970s. LWV seeks to secure equal rights and equal opportunity for all. We promote social and economic justice and the health and safety of all Americans. LWV supports equal rights for all under state and federal law regardless of sex, race, color, gender, religion, national origin, age, sexual orientation, or disability. LWV supports final publication of the fully ratified Equal Rights Amendment and efforts to bring existing laws into compliance with the goals of the ERA. Leagues across the country have worked to engage lawmakers and organize at the grassroots level to ensure equal rights for all, regardless of sex."

1972 Dems - A priority effort to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment;

1972 GOP- Continued our support of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution, our Party being the first national party to back this Amendment. Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment; Appointment of women to highest level positions in the Federal Government, including the Cabinet and Supreme Court.

Civil rights and matters of discrimination

The '70s were a watershed decade for women's equality. As the decade began, women could not obtain credit cards in their own names, be guaranteed they wouldn't be fired for being pregnant, serve on a jury in all states, fight on the front lines, get an Ivy League Education, defend themselves legally from spousal rape, access birth control or take legal action for workplace sexual harassment. Women's equality had a prominent place on both parties' platforms.

2023 LWV continues to promote equality for women in the workplace, in government, in education, in leadership and to support childcare, healthcare and equal pay for women.

1972 Dems called for the "elimination of discrimination against women in public accommodations and public facilities, public education and in all federally-assisted programs and federally contracted employment." They sought to bar job discrimination on the basis of sex, "increased efforts to open educational opportunities at all levels, eliminating discrimination against women in access to education, tenure, promotion and salary, to guarantee that all training programs are made more equitable, both in terms of the numbers of women involved and the job opportunities provided;

jobs must be available on the basis of skill, not sex, and guarantee that all training programs are made more equitable, both in terms of the numbers of women involved and the job opportunities provided.

1972 GOP wrote "In addition we have: Significantly increased resources devoted to enforcement of the Fair Labor Standards Act, providing equal pay for equal work; Required all firms doing business with the Government to have affirmative action plans for the hiring and promotion of women; Requested Congress to expand the jurisdiction of the Commission on Civil Rights to cover sex discrimination; Supported the Equal Employment Opportunity Act of 1972 giving the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission enforcement power in sex discrimination cases."

Caregiving and maternity benefits

Both parties recognized that women did most of the work of caregiving.

1972 Dems wrote in support of the "Availability of maternity benefits to all working women; temporary disability benefits should cover pregnancy, childbirth, miscarriage and recovery; Amendment of the Internal Revenue Code to permit working families to deduct from gross income as a business expense, housekeeping and child care costs."

1972 GOP prioritized "Other factors beyond outright employer discrimination—the lack of child care facilities, for example—can limit job opportunities for women. For lower and middle-income families, the President supported and signed into law a new tax provision which makes many childcare expenses deductible for working parents. Part of the President's recent welfare reform proposal would provide comprehensive daycare services so that women on welfare can work.

"We believe the primary responsibility for a child's care and upbringing lies with the family. However, we recognize that for economic and many other reasons many parents require assistance in the care of their children. To help meet this need, we favor the development of publicly or privately run, voluntary, comprehensive, quality day care services, locally controlled but federally assisted, with the requirement that the recipients of these services will pay their fair share of the costs according to their ability."

In addition, the 1972 GOP recommended and supported the passage of Title IX of the Higher Education Act opposing discrimination against women in educational institutions. The party further wrote, "We are proud of the contributions made by women to better government. We regard the active involvement of women at all levels of the political process, from precinct to national status, as of great importance to our country. The Republican Party welcomes and encourages their maximum participation."

Reproductive rights
This was the one area where neither party made a statement. On Jan. 22, 1973, the Supreme Court decided that women had a constitutional right to privacy in making a choice. In 2023, the LWV posted a statement that began with "For women and others who experience pregnancy, our basic freedoms hinge on our ability to control our reproductive health. Our physical and psychological wellbeing, financial resources, capacity to gain and maintain employment, and even our ability to eat certain foods are all dependent on our reproductive choices."

This stance would likely be the one that could be considered partisan in today's politics. In 1972, the lack of stance meant it was not a divisive or differentiating issue for the parties. At present, it's one of the most divisive. For some, it's a matter of healthcare for women, for others health and life for the child gestating. It is issues like this where we Americans need our democratic leaders, though they differ, to collaborate on what unites us and work out a governing compromise despite differences.

At present, politics may be likened to bloodless warfare, a means of making one side capitulate to the other through legal force. This is true when politicians take an "all-or-nothing" approach. Perhaps that is why so many Americans are disgusted by politics presently, according to Pew Research. It's dysfunctional; it doesn't have to be war. In founding this nation, the Fathers envisioned democracy as a governmental process that could bypass force and the violence of war. It would require collaboration and compromise. Non-partisanship remains the priority of the League of Women Voters because LWV believes democracy is worth the work. TIM From Page A1 are a believer, a religious person, you know Israel is a special place. Even if you are not, the idea that all your neighbors want you dead should resonate deeply.

As of this writing, the world is waiting for the Israeli Defense Force to go into Gaza and begin rooting out the evil that is Hamas. I am sure that the media will report on story after story of how Israel is now in the wrong. There will be innocent people who die. Cameras will be there to record the horrific events of war – and Israel will be blamed.

I believe we will hear a great deal about "proportional responses" and how Israel has gone overboard. Poppycock.

Did anyone talk about a proportional response after terrorists flew airliners into U.S. buildings a couple of decades ago? Would we have cared?

We made retribution for that dastardly act a mission that carried over into two presidential administrations – one Republican and one Democrat. What George W. Bush started, Barack Obama finished when Navy SEALs hunted down and killed Osama bin Laden.

God bless them. How can there be a proportional response for people who indiscriminately kill families, who kill babies?

Have you seen the videos?

A terrorist swings a shovel repeatedly onto the neck of a dead Israeli soldier in an effort to decapitate. Another shows a terrorist walking up to a wounded civilian lying helplessly on the ground and simply pointing their weapon at them and pulling the trigger. In Kfar Aza 40 babies were found murdered. Early reports indicated they were beheaded. That was later disputed. Does it matter? Forty babies were killed. It's evil. Evil like the world has only seen a few times.

For those who are calling for a rapid and peaceful solution – well, from your lips to God's ears. But I fear that God isn't the only supernatural force in play here. People who kill families, who murder babies, don't understand God. And they certainly don't understand proportional responses.

Astoundingly, there are multiple pundits who claim that such atrocities are fake news. Forget the fact that there are videos. Forget the fact that soldiers, journalists and people who live there have said they have seen the bodies first-hand. Some are denying it. The only explanation I can come up with is that it doesn't fit their narrative.

The truth and painful reality is that Israel is a nation of 9 million people surrounded by enemies who want them dead.

Surrounded. By. Enemies.

And what some folks – those calling for Israel to back down, to ease up with military actions – will never understand is that there are times when you have to fight. There are times when turning the other cheek doesn't work. We would like to say, to believe with all of our hearts, that reason will prevail. We want to think that we can bring everyone to the negotiating table and find some sort of peaceful solution.

But how do you find peace when one side only wants to squash you out of existence?

There's a lesson for us here in the U.S., too. We have enemies who want what we have. We also have an open border where millions have come into our country unchecked for a few years. Could what happen in Israel happen here?

And if it did, what would we do today? More than two decades ago, 9-11 galvanized us, brought all sides together. Would we unite again? Answer this. Where is the outrage over the 29 Americans who were killed by Hamas? Where is someone like Bush or Obama telling Hamas that no matter what Israel does, we will hunt down those who killed our citizens and make them pay?

Where is our national will?

Again, as of this writing the world is watching and waiting to see what Israel does. Here's wishing them the very best in their mission.
