Mike Warren Taking Run at County Council

Life-long Montgomery County resident Mike Warren announced he will run as a Republican candidate for county council at-large. "I am excited to announce my candidacy for County Council At-large," Warren said "I believe in the potential of our community and want to take on an active role on the council to ensure we continue in the right direction." Warren was born and raised in Montgomery

Infant formula had for decades been touted as the way to nourish newborns, but new evidence supported nature's tried and true method. Funny to consider, but the adoption of formula may be one factor that has allowed women to have careers. Its invention in 1865 had a powerful impact, not only on saving the lives of orphaned infants and babies whose mothers couldn't nurse, but on world economies, national GDP and household income from the Industrial Revolution to the present. Suddenly poor women didn't have to leave their infants in a foundry to become wet nurses to wealthier families. Poor and wealthy women had a dry nursing option, providing wealthy women who didn't want to nurse and women desperate to work with a stable source of nutrition for their infants. Formula afforded women choices, giving them flexibility to work. More than a hundred years later, the overwhelming evidence supports breastfeeding, whenever possible,

The Monthly Women's Bridge Club

BUTCH DALE Columnist

When I was growing up in the 1950s and 1960s, it seemed that most of the men and women belonged to various clubs and organizations. The majority of parents of school age children were members of the PTA (Parent and Teachers Association), and several also belonged to various church groups. A few men joined the Masonic Lodge, but many of the former lodges, such as the Knights of Pythias, the Odd Fellows, Red Men, Good Templars, Lions Club, and a few others had ceased to exist. The largest organization for men was the American Legion Post 302, as there were numerous WWI and WWII veterans. Many of the earlier women's groups had fizzled out, too . . . the Fortnightly Needle Club, Anthologia Club, Mozart

Club, Pandora Club, the Pansy Rebekah Lodge, the Order of the Rainbow, and the Pythian Sisters, but the ladies organized new groups through the years. While the men seemed satisfied to meet at the restaurant, service stations, barber shop, pool hall, drug store, Legion hall, and elevator to discuss anything and everything, the women liked to meet at each other's homes and mix in hobbies, crafts, and entertainment with their activities. Four of the largest women groups were the Book Lover's Club, the Home Art Club,

THE MONTGOMERY MINUTE

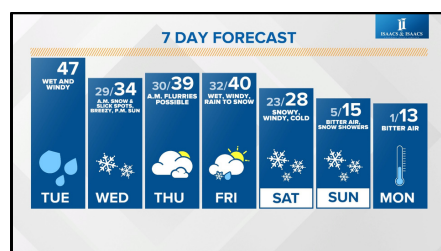

The Indianapolis Home Show is coming back to the Indiana State Fairgrounds for the 102nd time and guess who will have free tickets once again? That's right, your favorite Montgomery County newspaper! Mark the dates on your calendar - Friday, Jan. 19 through Sunday, Jan. 28. This Indiana tradition is the oldest home show in North America and to get your FREE tickets from us, all you'll have to do is send a selfie with your smiling face, our front page (electronic or print) and your name and contact information. And hey, if you want to say something nice about us, we wouldn't object! E-mail it to news@thepaper24-7.com, but hurry, supplies are limited!

THREE THINGS You Should Know

- 1 Want to learn how to draw eyes? Then Athens Arts might just be your ticket. A class on exactly that is set for January 25th. You can choose either an afternoon session (1-3 p.m.) or an evening session (6-8 p.m.). Class is open to anyone 12 years and older. Cost is $35. Classes meet at Athens Arts, 216 E. Main St. in beautiful downtown Crawfordsville. To reserve a spot stop by Athens Arts Thursdays and Fridays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. or on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. or call (765) 362-7455 and leave a voice message.
2 Crawfordsville Mayor Todd Barton has scheduled his 128th community forum with the public. This month's meeting is scheduled for Jan. 22 from 8 a.m. to 9 a.m. at Mc McDonald's North, 1000 Smith Rd. As always, the public is invited to come and talk about anything and everything related to the city.
3 Don't forget, we're now e-mailing The Paper piping hot and fresh at 4 a.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays - except for holidays - and this coming Monday is a holiday. The price is still $42 and you can renew or buy a subscription at www.thepaper24-7.com. And since Monday is Martin Luther King Day - you won't see us then, but we'll be back Wednesday!

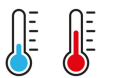

The Paper appreciates all our customers. Today, we'd like to personally thank DENISE BOWMAN for subscribing!

➔ OBITUARY

Glen Albert Switzer

May 24, 1927 – Jan 7, 2024

Glen Albert Switzer, age 96 of Crawfordsville, passed away on Sunday, January 7, 2024 at Wellbrooke of Crawfordsville. He was born in Wingate, Indiana on May 24, 1927 to the late Russell & Lucille (Murphy) Switzer.

Glen attended Wingate Schools and proudly served his country in the United States Navy during WWII. On October 16, 1948 he married, Mary Kathryn VanDame, who preceded him in death on March 29, 1998. He worked at Raybestos as a maintenance supervisor and retired after 30 plus years. After retirement he moved to Lake Placid, Florida for many years. He was a life-time member of the Crawfordsville American Legion Post 72, where he was a member for 77 years, and a member of the VFW, and the Elks, Eagles, and Moose Lodges. He enjoyed dancing, boating, playing cards and poker, and spending time with his friends at the Legion.

He is survived by his four sons, Mike (Vickie) Switzer, David (Nin) Switzer, Terry (Cindy) Switzer, and Russell (Tammy) Switzer; 13 grandchildren, Shannon (Erin) Switzer, Jacob (Amanda) Switzer, James (Lisa) Switzer, Jennifer (Ben) Evans, Janelle (Stephen) Escalante, Denise (Don) Otterburg, Dawn (David) Biggs, Keith (Shannon) Switzer, Kelly (Eric) Rose, Ben (Jim Mason) Switzer, Sara (Neal) Alfano, Justin Dugger, and Misty (Kyle) Bowers; 22 great grandchildren; and 4 great-great grandchildren.

He was preceded in death by his parents; his wife, Mary Switzer; a sister, Evelyn Hoffman; a daughter-in-law, Leah Switzer, and a great granddaughter, Caitlyn Gail Lee Switzer. Visitation will be at Sanders Shoemaker Funeral Care, 202 Bratton Road in Waynetown on Saturday, January 13, 2024 from 11:00am till the time of the funeral service at 1:00pm with Pastor Kevin Howey officiating and military honors by the United States Navy and Legion Post 72 Honor Guard. Burial will follow at Waynetown Masonic Cemetery. In lieu of flowers, memorial donations may be given to the Veteran's Memorial Park, PO Box 804, Crawfordsville, IN 47933. County. He grew up in Linden with his brothers John, Bill and Kory, the sons of Greg and Kathy. Warren graduated from North Montgomery High School in 1989 and Wabash College in 1993. Warren is also a graduate of the Montgomery County Leadership Academy. He has worked at Wabash College for 23 years and currently serves as the Senior Associate Director of Alumni and Affinity Group Engagement. Aside from his work at Wabash College, Warren has been active in working with our community's youth for years, coaching at Wabash and at North Montgomery. He has also spent time umpiring for youth baseball leagues as well as a volunteer youth coach, and previously served on the Montgomery County Boys & Girls Club Board of Directors. "Through collaborative efforts with county council members and others, I wish to help continue the growth of our community, while being fiscally responsible with taxpayer dollars," Warren said. "While working to create a brighter future for all residents, it is important to me to remain committed to those residents in keeping Montgomery County a safe and desirable place to live, work and play." Warren resides near Darlington with his wife, Kimberly. They have two sons, Kaleb and Kai.

Indiana Arts Commission Accepting Applications

The Indiana Arts Commission and its Regional Arts Partners announced today the opening of applications for the Fiscal Year 2025 Arts Project Support grant program. Arts Project Support grants provide nonprofit organizations and public entities with funding to support a specific arts activity, such as a one-time event, a single production, an exhibition, an educational workshop, or a series of related arts activities such as art classes or training sessions. The purpose of the program is to provide broad access to arts opportunities throughout the state. Applicants may request up to $4,000 to support their project, and there is no match requirement. Projects must occur between July 1, 2024 and June 30, 2025 to be eligible for FY25 Arts Project Support. "Arts Project Support grants are a wonderful opportunity for Indiana communities to bolster and grow their creative activities," said Miah Michaelsen, IAC Executive Director. "We encourage organizations and public entities to apply for funding to start new programming, expand existing offerings, or reimagine a community event. Arts and creativity help strengthen the fabric of Indiana communities, and we are proud to support the creative community development work that Hoosiers are doing in every corner of our state." A Program Information Webinar for Returning Applicants will be held on Jan.18 at 4 p.m. A Program Information Webinar for New Applicants will take place on Jan. 24, 4 p.m. Applications for Arts Project Support are due March 7, 2024, at 11:59 p.m. eastern time through the IAC's online grant system. I KNOW I said this in a previous column, but seriously, thank you so very much for your feedback and your reaction to our switch to three days a week. In my wildest dreams, I never thought this would be as smooth as it has been (well, OK, truth to tell my wildest dreams really have nothing to do with work . . . lotteries, sunny beaches . . . you get the idea). I know it's repetitive, but you guys are the smartest, most involved readers ever!

OK, IT'S been a few days and I'm still not over the Colts' loss to the Texans last Saturday. To rub more salt in the wound, the Jacksonville Jags choked the next day against lowly Tennessee and so had the Colts won – had one pass been just a tiny bit better and had one tight end made the catch – they would be AFC South champs once again. To be fair, after quarterback Anthony Richardson missed the vast majority of the season we never should have expected a winning record, let alone a a conference title and playoff run . . . but doggone, we were so close!

ARE YOU familiar with Collette Travel? If you are like me, it rings a bell – especially if you are a Wheel of Fortune watcher. Collette Travel was the name behind all those great trips contestants can win. Well, stay tuned. In the very near future the little paper that could is going to make an announcement about a new partnership with the good folks at Collette – and it could mean a big trip for you!

WE ARE hanging out our help wanted signs. And we have options – lots and lots of options. Mostly, we're looking for sales people. This could be full time, but it could be part time. It could be in the office, but it could be remote. It could be seeing clients in person, but it could be just phone calls . . . are you getting the idea that there's a lot of flexibility here? Good, because there is. In all seriousness, if you have any interest in sales at all, let me know. We're not hung up on what days or hours someone works. In fact, we are talking to someone right now who is retired and is planning on making calls for us one afternoon a week. If you can sell, we'll find a way to fit your schedule and needs!

SPEAKING OF the new schedule, don't forget that we don't publish on holidays. That means no edition on Monday, MLK Day. Ditto on Presidents' Day on Feb. 19. But after that, you're stuck with us every Monday-Wednesday-Friday until Memorial Day!

AL JAFFEE HAD a huge influence on a lot of Baby Boomers in our youth. Born Abraham Jaffee, Allan became famous for his work in Mad Magazine. He's the guy who created Mad's back cover fold-in feature and the regular feature Snappy Answers to Stupid Questions (I often wondered if that was what influenced Bill Engvall's Here's Your Sign routine). Jaffee passed away in April last year. He was 102. A whole lot of us who can -- on occasion -- be considered wisecracs probably owe at least some of that to him. Rest in peace, Mr. Jaffee!

as the superior means to help little humans thrive, and its benefits last a lifetime, which has left working mothers with a conundrum. How long can they nurse infants before they must return to work? When they return, can they sustain a practice of pumping and storing milk? How long? Will their FMLA or parental leave, in combination with employer support, help facilitate two years of nursing as recommended by pediatricians, the CDC and World Health Organization? Until the passage of national standards in 2023, workplace regulations were spotty, varying state by state. Seventy percent of employed mothers with children under 3 work full time. In the U.S., most employers provide no more than six weeks of paid maternal-parental leave – some pay even less! – after which most women need to return to work to keep their households financially stable. The CDC reports that one-third of mothers return to work within three months of giving birth and two-thirds return to work within six months, and once they do, breastfeeding drops off. Lower-income women, who are mostly African American and Hispanic American, work service jobs and in blue-collar industries, making breastfeeding a challenge, even as their children are at higher risk for the very conditions that breastfeeding helps to prevent. Infant formula is an adequate, but less-than-ideal solution. Early on, formula provided a means to fatten up babies, but doctors knew it lacked vitamins. Older readers may recall mixing evaporated milk, Karo syrup and vitamin supplements daily to create their supply. In 1980, the FDA regulated formula and many shelf-stable brands came ready to mix with water. Unsafe tap water and shortages in recent memory have plagued its usage, but at least formula helped women whose workplaces failed to accommodate lactation. Yet formula cannot replace the unique benefits of breastmilk. According to thousands of studies examined by the medical journal Lancet, breast milk:

- naturally has all the nutrients babies need to grow and develop. It adapts with an infant, balancing proteins, fats and healthy sugars as the baby grows.
- has antibodies that improve “passive immunity” to prevent sickness. Formula-fed babies are sick more often, leading parents to take off more time from work and seek medical help more often.
- helps prevent health problems such as allergies, eczema, ear infections and stomach problems.
- may prevent one-third of respiratory infections and half of all diarrhea episodes.
- prevents 800,000 child deaths a year, based on more than 1,300 studies.
- helps reduce obesity and diabetes.

- helps prevent sudden infant death syndrome.
- eases post-pregnancy weight loss.
- Increases oxytocin which helps improve mood for many women.
- helps lower the risk for breast and ovarian cancers, diabetes and certain other diseases in mothers.
- saves nearly $1,000 a year.
- is safer to use than formula when water is not safe.

In some countries and industries, women receive extended paid time off to establish a strong breastfeeding routine, which is critical to producing enough breast milk. When it comes to breastfeeding, demand sustains supply, and when women don't have frequent, long enough, private, quiet spaces as well as tools to pump breast milk, they are more likely to abandon nursing. In the absence of appropriate parental leave, nursing mothers need supportive workplaces to maintain a healthy breastfeeding routine. To standardize the workplace, the 2023 Omnibus Spending Act included a measure requiring companies to provide space and time for women to pump breast milk. The new regulation covers hourly workers eligible for overtime pay who work for companies with more than 50 employees. It requires companies to provide the time and a place to pump. Before last year's law, the workplace lacked uniformity, with some states and exemplary organizations helping lactating women. Even after its passage, lactation at work may continue to be a challenge. Women who are unaware of their rights may be employed by organizations that do the bare minimum to meet OSHA requirements. Purdue professor Elizabeth Hoffman wrote a 2022 study published on lactation at work, finding that employers in states required to provide breaks and places to express breast milk varied in how well they followed the laws. Her study found that some employers provide robust accommodations – private rooms with pumps and fridges close to the workspaces of employees, plenty of regular breaks, lactation education and support groups. Hoffman found some employers publicize or recruit saying they support lactating mothers, but may be omitting all of the elements of a quality implementation. The least cooperative employers follow the mere letter of the law. Women may have limited break time with lactation rooms so far from workstations that most of the break is spent in travel to and from the space. Without enough time, appropriate support and tools, breastfeeding mothers more quickly abandon their resolution to work and breastfeed. Thus, parents must know about and speak up for their rights, knowing the benefits of being able to pump at work improves health and life in multiple ways. Change often brings resistance or reticence, even when the law requires it, but if parents band together and speak to their HR departments, companies will need to comply.

the Homemaker's Extension Club, and the Garden Club. Very few women worked outside the home in those days, but they were always quite busy with taking care of their children and home, helping out at school and church events . . . or for many country women, also helping their husbands on the farm. Many women also formed clubs to play cards with each other, and one such group was "bridge club," to which my mother, Millie Dale, belonged. Some of the other ladies in this club were Mildred Weliever, Emma Lou Weliever, Betty Royer, Betty Anderson, Barbara "Barkie" Hampton, Juanita McCauley, Kathryn Branstetter, Mary Ellen "Pee Wee" Harmon, and Edie Clouser. They met once a month, rotating at each other's home. It was not an "official" club, as there were no officers or stated goals. These women were all friends who just liked to get together and "get away from the house" and husbands and kids once in a while . . . and have fun being with each other. The women dressed up . . . but nothing real fancy . . . usually a nice dress. They wore makeup, and sometimes had on nylons and high heels. The hostess served coffee and tea, along with some snacks and a special dessert . . . and inexpensive prizes were awarded to the winners of the bridge games. While playing cards, the ladies talked about their husbands and kids, the price of groceries, the latest fashions, new recipes, etc, etc. . . . and of course the latest gossip. However, as a child listening in on both men and women at times, I can honestly say that the men gossiped more than the women! When it was time for my mother to host bridge club, she had me (and later on my brothers and sisters) help her get everything ready for the evening's get-together. I swept and dusted the living room and kitchen and got out the card tables and chairs as she prepared the snacks and dessert. She got out her best tablecloths, dishes, and silverware and sometimes placed little decorations or flowers around the room. Dad usually left to visit his buddies at the Legion hall, but for a few years, he was in a group that went bowling in Crawfordsville on those nights. These ladies often played cards for two or three hours. I never heard any discussions of politics or current national events. I never witnessed any arguments or disputes. Everyone just seemed to get along, enjoy the evening, and catch up on the latest goings-on. And there were a few women who could tell some great jokes! Through the years, as more women took jobs outside the home, the various clubs and organizations began to dwindle down. Many ladies just couldn't find the time . . . or were too tired . . . to keep the clubs going. Today there are very few of these groups around. Men and women simply stay at home in the evening . . . and rarely socialize in an organized club, lodge, or other group. In our town, there is no longer a restaurant, drug store, barber shop, pool hall, or elevator to congregate, although we still do have a Legion hall and mini-mart. Unfortunately, watching TV has become the main activity in the evenings. The schools, which were once located in the small towns, are now miles away in the countryside. When people knew all of the other families and their kids, many attended sports events. In fact, a person had to arrive early to get a seat. Now . . . not so much. There are usually plenty of seats at high school basketball games, for instance. My mother always looked forward to the monthly bridge club. Dad enjoyed "loafing" with his buddies in town. Sadly, for most people...those days are long gone.

Ivy Tech Gets Grant to Support Health Programs

Ivy Tech Community College Lafayette is proud to announce a generous grant of $875,000 from North Central Health Services (NCHS) over the next five years. This substantial support will be pivotal in advancing the college's nursing, psychology, human services, and addiction studies programs. Of this significant contribution, $500,000 is allocated to the North Central Health Services Nursing Scholarship. This marks a continued commitment by NCHS to bolster Ivy Tech's Nursing Program, responding to the statewide call for expanding the nursing workforce in Indiana. Stephanie Long, Chief Executive Officer of NCHS, commented on the partnership: "Our ongoing collaboration with Ivy Tech reflects our shared dedication to addressing critical healthcare needs in our region. By supporting these vital educational programs, we are investing in the future of healthcare professionals who will serve our communities with skill and compassion." The North Central Health Services Nursing Scholarship will provide essential financial support to students pursuing nursing careers, a field experiencing a significant demand for qualified professionals. This scholarship not only assists in easing the financial burden on students but also plays a crucial role in fulfilling the region's healthcare needs. "This generous gift from NCHS is a testament to their faith in our institution and our students," Dr. Sandy Fights, Dean of the School of Nursing at Ivy Tech Lafayette, expressed her gratitude. "It enables us to further our mission in educating and preparing top-tier nursing professionals. We are deeply appreciative of NCHS's continued partnership and support." The grant will also contribute to other critical areas of health education at Ivy Tech, encompassing psychology, human services, and addiction studies. This holistic approach ensures a well-rounded support system for the future healthcare workforce. Ivy Tech Lafayette's nursing program is renowned for its excellence in preparing students for the NCLEX-RN licensure exam to become registered nurses, offering various pathways into nursing including programs for LPNs, medical assistants, paramedics, and military medic personnel. Ivy Tech Lafayette continues to demonstrate its commitment to healthcare education and addressing the workforce needs in Indiana.

Lunch with the League Friday

Join the League of Women Voters for their first Lunch with the League in 2024! Diamond Justus, the Public Health Educator for the Montgomery County Health Department, will present an interesting program of how our local Health Department supports healthy adults and children in our community with a wide array of programs and resources. The Health Department not only provides services such as the Diaper Pantry and free health screenings but also relays important health information to the public such as information about COVID-19 and other infectious diseases. Public awareness about health related resources and programs and issues of importance affecting the public health is important to the success of efforts to maintain the public health and wellness. Justus is in charge of making sure the public has information on these programs and resources, by creating and distributing material for our community, facilitating committee and coalition meetings and events and creating and organizing health related programs. She started her journey as an intern with the Health Department in 2021 while working on her bachelor's degree in psychology. After graduating from college, and working as a case manager for Valley Oaks, Justus started working full-time with the Health Department as a Public Health Educator. Her role has allowed her to expand and grow programs for the community such as creating the Montgomery County Diaper Pantry, re-launching the Wellness Coalition, collaborating with Drug Free Montgomery County and hosting the 2nd Annual Montgomery County Baby Shower, among many other programs and events. Bring your brown bag lunch or grab a treat from one of the many restaurants and eateries around town, and join the League at noon on Friday. The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization whose interest is informing the public on issues of vital interest. Unless otherwise indicated, Lunch with the League takes place the first Friday of each month, starting at noon on the 3rd Floor of Fusion 54. All Lunch with the League events are open to the public and will allow time for questions and answers at the end of each presentation.

Diamond Justus, Public Health Educator
